'Little Steel' Loses Appeal From NLRB Strike Order

Board Announces Remington Rand Pact to Dissolve 9 Company Unions

Ending of two angry labor controversies of long standing came yesterday in actions by the Supreme Court and the National Labor Relations Board.

The high court refused to review the NLRB's order for reinstatement, with back pay, of thousands of strikers in the Republic Steel case, and the NLRB announced an agreement with Remington-Rand, Inc., for disestablishment of nine unions alleged by the A. F. of L. to have been company-dominated.

Jubilant C. I. O. official's estimates of the amount of money involved in the "Little Steel" strike fight, both in the back wages and in suits which they said would be affected by yesterday's court ruling, ranged up to $16,000,000.

Bridges Wins Review

In another action of interest to labor, the Supreme Court granted Harry Bridges, C. I. O. maritime labor leader, a review of his conviction of contempt for criticizing a California court decision.

While it had been estimated some 5,000 Republic Steel workers would be benefited by the labor board's order, board circles yesterday predicted some 9,000 claims would have to be passed on, requiring the board to send a staff of field workers to sites of the company's plant in order to check the claims and employment records.

Most of the affected workers were understood to have been reemployed already, and company officials said no major reemployment task was involved. However, there must be a check to determine whether present jobs of the workers are "substantially" equal to those held before the strike.

Relief Pay to Be Deducted

From each worker's back pay, under the board's order, there must be deducted any sums paid to him from Federal works funds, such sums to be returned to the Government.

Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O.'s Steel Workers Organizing Committee, told the Associated Press at Pittsburgh, the Supreme Court action gave strong support to suits against the company involving $16,000,000. He said:

"In addition the decision destroyed the company's ($7,500,000) case against the SWOC, in its contention the strike was a conspiracy for the purpose of interfering with the business of the corporation."

The NLRB order sustained by the court directed back pay only from October, 1938, five days after the order was handed down. The $7,500,000 in additional claims, Murray said, concerns pay asked from the time of the strike in June, 1937 until the order was handed down.

Daughter of the Regiment

Patricia Donovan Is Killed When Car Crashes Into Tree

Father Commanded 'Fighting 69th' in War; Was on Way Home

Miss Patricia Donovan, 22-year-old daughter of Col. William J. Donovan, of Washington, one-time Assistant Attorney General and World War hero, was fatally injured yesterday when her automobile ran into a tree 35 miles south of Fredericksburg, Va.

The girl, who was to have been graduated from George Washington University next June, died at Mary Washington Hospital, Fredericksburg, five hours after the accident.

Miss Donovan was known as the "daughter of the Fighting Sixty-Ninth." She was born in Buffalo, N. Y., on the day her father, who later became Col. "Wild Bill" Donovan, joined the famous New York regiment and was christened by Father Francis Duffy, celebrated war chaplain of that regiment.

Police said the car, heading north on Route No. 1 highway in a heavy downpour, skidded off the road into a tree. Miss Donovan was thrown out of the auto and found 14 feet away by a passing motorist several minutes after the mishap. She was taken to the hospital suffering from exposure, shock and internal injuries, she died without regaining consciousness.

Death Store Bandit Seized In Gun Chase

Trio Flees Scene Of Sirkis Killing After Robbing Place; One Believed Shot

Police last night captured a bandit and possibly wounded another in a 70-mile-an-hour running gun battle through Northeast Washington with three gunmen who had held up a liquor store.

The store, at 4824 Deane avenue northeast, is the scene of the holdup slaying of Herman Sirkis, former Baltimore policeman, who was fatally wounded when he shot it out with bandits on February 26. The murder touched off a violent crime wave in the District.

May Be Sirkis Killers

Detective Sergt. Edgar E. Scott, who participated in the wild chase, declared last night "there is a possibility the bandits are the same who killed Sirkis."

At 10:20 last night two of the colored robbers entered the liquor store, drew guns and held up two brothers-in-law of the slain Sirkis, Max Isikoff and Thomas Isikoff, of Baltimore, who have been running the business; the clerk, Sam Pinerman, of 1741 L street northwest, and the delivery boy, Rudolph Thornton, of 4640 Hayes streets northeast.

One of the gunmen demanded that the contents of the cash register be turned over, and after several minutes of argument, punctuated with threats by the robbers, they left with $228 and escaped in an automobile held in waiting by a third man.

Blocks Throw at Gunmen

When one of the Isikoffs attempted to hurl a bottle of liquor at the fleeing thugs, the other, fearing retaliation, blocked the throw. He remembered that Sirkis had been killed when he shot at two bandits who had taken $51 from his till.

Thornton, the delivery boy, managed to obtain a description and the tag numbers of the getaway car and police cruiser cars immediately surrounded the area.

Thirty minutes after the holdup a suspicious citizen observed the car parked at Forty-fourth and J street northeast. The trio apparently were dividing up the loot.

The citizen's tip led police to set a trap on Benning road, at Twenty-eighth street northeast, at the outlet to the Deanewood section. Scout Car No. 91, with Privates J. A. Davis and R. A. Neilson; Scout Car No. 92, with Privates W. A. Firefield and C. E. Hall, and a private automobile with Detective Sergt. Scott and Detective Irving Lubore, rushed to the bottleneck and waited with motors running.

A few minutes after the police reached the Benning trap, the hold-

Danes Signed Pact With Reich

Denmark, invaded this morning by German troops, was the only one of the Scandinavian states to conclude a bilateral nonaggression treaty with Germany. It outlawed war or any act of violence by one of the signatories against the other and was signed by them last June 1.

The pact followed President Roosevelt's appeal to Germany and Italy for a pledge that they would not attack 31 specified nations. Fuehrer Hitler announced he was willing to give guarantees to Germany's Scandinavian and Baltic neighbors.

Denmark, Latvia and Estonia agreed. Norway, Sweden and Finland were cool to the offer, preferring to avoid it as a compremise to their complete neutrality.

Three-Hour Alarm Reported in Oslo

London (Tuesday), April 9 (A.P.).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency reported today that an air raid alarm was sounded at 2 a. m. (8 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.) in Oslo, the Norwegian capital, and that no all clear signal had been given three hours later. (A previous dispatch from Stockholm said that a one-hour alarm at Oslo had ended at 1:30 a. m., Oslo Time.)

Copenhagen (Tuesday) April 9.—German troops this morning invaded Denmark, occupying Copenhagen, the capital, and several other cities in an apparently bloodless "blitzkrieg."

Fuehrer Hitler's legions launched the unheralded attack at about 5 a. m. (11 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.) crossing the narrow frontier at several points and landing troops at at at least six seaports, with apparently no resistance from Denmark's tiny army.

Infantry, artillery and mechanized units were put ashore at Nyborg, Funen, Korsoer and Zeeland, and three cruisers appeared at Middlefart and put ashore landing parties which immediately occupied streets adjoining the wharves.

[Responsible German quarters at 7:15 A. M. today said they had "no knowledge" of any German action against Denmark, the United Press reported from Brlin.]

Communication with Copenhagen from New York was cut off at 6 a. m., G. M. T. (midnight, E. S. T.). Radio Corporation of America reports it had received this message at that time from its station OZT at Copenhagen: ". . . Closing all circuits; occupied by German soldiers. Good-by."

(Similar message was received by Mackay Radio.)

Last night there had been rumors in South Denmark that several trainloads of German troops, totaling 45,000 men, were expected at Flensberg, Germany, on the frontier, but Danes had believed those troops were to embark for some other points. There was no hint they would be used to invade this tiny country of 3,800,000 people and 16,575 square miles.

The Danish garrison and Sonderberg was reported to have retreated quietly before the German column which crossed into Schleswig Province.

Primaries Test Roosevelt, Dewey Today

President, New York Attorney Favored In Nebraska, Illinois

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Spurred by Wisconsin successes a week ago, third-term supporters of President Roosevelt and Republican backers of Thomas E. Dewey last night forecast convincing victories today in two more Corn Belt primaries.

Illinois will test Roosevelt sentiment against Vice President Garner's third-term challenge, with the President a heavy favorite to win; while Illinois Republicans vote on the unopposed entry of New York District Attorney Dewey.

In Nebraska, the President is unopposed, and Dewey is challenged for the second time by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan. Quoted odds are on another Dewey victory.

Senatorial Battle

A hard fought special Congressional election, and a close battle for the Democratic senatorial nomination will complete Nebraska's offering on election trends.

Backed by the powerful Kelly-Nash-Horner organizations, Roosevelt prospects in Illinois appeared brighter than in Wisconsin, where Garner captured nearly a third of the preferential vote and elected two delegates.

Draft-movement leaders predicted an 8-to-1 Roosevelt ballot. The Garner people eyed skeptically these odds but allowing for third-term machine backing were not inclined to question a Roosevelt sweep.

Similarly, the Vandenberg camp was dismayed by the last-minute spurt of Dewey activity in Nebraska, where radio speeches and advertising for the youthful New Yorker were reaching a crossroads. Vandenberg, confined by his Senate duties, did not enter the State, but sent Senator Nye, of North Dakota, to make speeches for him, and released farm policy indorsements by Republican liberals.

Watch Size of Vote

Illinois' 58 delegates, plus Nebraska's 14 would give new heart to the draft Roosevelt movement, even though the President, as most Democratic leaders believe, intends to use them for convention control and not for his renomination.

Similar Republican primary gains in the corn belt for Dewey would seriously damage Vandenberg's pre-

Kreps Outlines U. S. Industry's Gains, Perils

Monopoly Committee Hears of Technical Progress, Pioneering

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Prophets of economic stagnation were challenged yesterday as the Monopoly Committee opened its key investigation into the effect of modern technological developments on unemployment in America.

In the college classroom atmosphere that has become characteristic of the committee's hearings, an economist and an editor-scientist sketched a picture of an American civilization expanding into the future and belying that "inveterate pathological characteristic of periods of depression: the hue and cry that opportunities no longer exist, that the frontier is gone, that the pace of advance is bound to slow down."

Market Is Called Need

An outline of amazing progress in industrial technique in the last few decades was presented by Dr. T. J. Kreps, economic adviser to the committee, together with a warning of the pitfalls to democracy which he said this development carries with it.

Industry, he said, is equipped to produce a national income of $90,000,000,000 or more. "At the present

British Stand Fast on Mining Norway's Seas

Prime Minister To Defend Action In Commons Today

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), April 9.—Naval sources professed today to have no exact knowledge of a German armada reported steaming northward in the Kattegat off Norway, but other sources advanced two possible explanations.

First was that the group of warships, trawlers and auxiliary vessels might be attempting to sow a mine field in the Skagerrak which would seal up the Baltic, and second, that the German vessels might seek to destroy the Allies' mine field sown off Norway.

The British navy, which sowed three minefields in an hour "without incident" yesterday at dawn, was "ready" and Britain stood fast on the defiant mine-laying despite vigorous protests by Norway and ominous rumors of a possible Nazi naval drive.

Prime Minister Chamberlain is scheduled to explain and defend the Allied action in a statement before the House of Commons today.

Britain, stating the action was taken in reprisal for German attacks on neutral shipping, hoped to halt the use of Norwegian territorial waters by German ships taking Swedish ore to the Reich by forcing them out into the open sea where they might be intercepted by British naval craft.

(An official British radio announcement heard in New York by the Columbia Broadcasting System said the Allies as a result of the mine laying have trapped "seven German ships in the ore port of Narvik and another eight ships somewhere along the Norwegian coast.")

Informed sources declared the action would "not lead to serious friction between Britain and Norway," and Scandinavians in London familiar with shipping and port problems professed to believe that the blockade's effect would be only "temporary." They said that the entire flow of Swedish iron ore to Germany could be diverted to the Gulf of Bothnia in May or June, when the ice breaks up in the Gulf, if the Germans are able to split the handling of the shipments among Stettin, Bremerhaven and Hamburg by way of the Kiel Canal. Swedish railways also are

Nazi Invasion 'Incredible,' Says Dane Here

Attache at Embassy Recalls Berlin Pledge To Refrain From Attack

A lone attache in a nearly empty Danish Legation came to the front door in pajamas and a raincoat early this morning and declared in the name of his country that reports of Germany's invasion of Denmark are "incredible."

"It is the most unexpected thing that could happen," Povl Bang-Jensen, the attache and acting minister, said. "There is no strategic value in taking Denmark. It is just another case of Germany's taking a small country for the sake of conquest."

The Minister, Henrik de Kauffman, and other high officials of the legation were out of town. Bang-Jensen was left in charge of a deserted building whose silence was continually being broken by the jangle of telephones from inquiring diplomats and newspapers.

Lights flashed on and off in the legation as the solitary diplomat rushed from room to room answering different telephones.

Commenting on the reported invasion, Bang-Jensen recalled that almost a year ago Germany and Denmark made an agreement not to attack each other. The pact was signed following a suggestion from President Roosevelt in a peace note to Chancellor Hitler that the Nazi government guarantee the independence of a specific list of countries, of which Denmark was one.

The Danish Legation had received no official word of the invasion from the Foreign Ministry in Copenhagen by early this morning, Bang-Jensen said. But he added that he planned to telephone home near dawn.

As word of the invasion was received shortly before midnight, officials were hurriedly notified but could say little in the absence of many details other than to declare that "hell has broken loose." The best information was contained in press dispatches.

The information brought several European officials to the State Department, with A. A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, directing the situation. President Roosevelt was in Hyde Park and Secretary of State Cordell Hull was spending a two days vacation in Atlantic City. He was scheduled to return to the Capital this afternoon.

First thought of officials was concerning the safety of Americans in Denmark and measures that might be necessary for evacuating them as soon as possible. Decisions in that regard presumably will await clearer information

Invasion of Oslo Fjord Repelled by Coastal Guns

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Tuesday), April 9.—Oslo, one of the capitals of neutral Scandinavia, was attacked by a mysterious naval expedition of an unknown power striking from the darkness of Skagerrak Channel early today—less than a month after the northern countries had thought to escape war by the Finnish-Russian peace.

Authoritative quarters here confirmed previous reports that four warships attempted to force the entrance to Oslo Fjord, water gateway to the Norwegian capital, but were beaten off by coastal batteries which constitute one of the four most important of Norwegian defenses.

Presumably the attack was from a German fleet, of 125 ships of all types, earlier reported steaming through the Kattegat, near Denmark, from the Baltic in a northern direction. However, British naval units also were numerous off Norwegian shores yesterday.

One of the latter, a submarine, yesterday sank a German troop transport within four miles of the Norwegian coast, killing and

Prelude to a Blossom Festival

Rain-Swollen Potomac Rising; Areas in Maryland Flooded

The Potomac River and its tributaries began to rise yesterday under the impetus of a 2-inch rainfall, but United States flood experts declared serious overflow unlikely and managers of Washington's tourist trade looked through the gloomy weather to a record visitation with blooming cherry trees by the weekend.

At Bladensburg, Md., perennial victim of the frequently swollen northwest branch of the Anacostia River, water stood 8 inches deep over a short stretch of the Washington - Baltimore boulevard at Peace Cross. Traffic was slowed at the intersection but the highway was kept open.

The United States Geological Survey ordered observers at Riverdale, Md., to make hourly checks of the level of the Northeast Branch of the Anacostia River, but emphasized that it is as much concerned about the record it is making for a study by Army Engineers as it is by rise in the stream.

The survey gauge at Jefferson avenue in Riverdale showed a rise of 4.36 feet from 8:30 a. m. to 8:45 p. m. A survey gauge in Rock Creek near Walter Reed Hospital showed a rise of 1.2 feet from noon to 6 p. m.

Before morning the Northeast Branch was expected to reach a crest, 4½ feet above average low water and 3 feet below flood stage. The Rock Creek reading was 3½ feet below flood stage.

Late Weather Bureau forecasts were for the rain to stop before morning with today to be cloudy and slightly cooler. Tomorrow will be fair, the bureau said.

HOW THE NEW DEAL WAS BORN

(Mr. Moley guided FDR; but who guided Mr. Moley?)

The Hon. Mr. Raymond Moley is in print again, explaining the inexplicable. That is, he is analyzing the Antimonopoly Committee, which as yet doesn't itself know what it's after doing.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

In deep admiration of his courage in tackling this job, which every newspaperman in Washington has ducked, I've reread his book of Roosevelt revelations, "After 7 Years," to get a slant on Mr. Moley. The book is illuminating about Mr. Moley as well as Mr. Roosevelt.

* * * *

It's plain that Mr. Moley gradually educated and later guided Mr. Roosevelt, only to be disappointed with him eventually. But who educated and guided Mr. Moley? Where did he get all the ideas he threw at FDR some of which bounced back?

* * * *

Maybe I can throw some light on that. A man doesn't grow from an Ohio alderman* into a power-behind-the-throne, even a sort of Assistant Secretary of State, in one puff. And a man who can analyze the Antimonopoly Committee is worth analysis himself. Mr. Moley is a close student of human nature with almost a feminine instinct for men's motives.

*This is unfair: Mr. Moley was actually Mayor of Olmstead Falls, Ohio.

"—a farm plan pops into mind."

Apparently Mr. Moley was always jotting down notes of conversations in those heroic days of 1932-33. I'm indebted to some notes on the cuffs of some shirts he apparently left in a hotel, one day when he hurried off to make history. These were omitted from his excellent book.

Feb. 4. Had my shoes half-soled today. Fascinated by the whirling wheel with which the cobbler smoothed the edges. Asked him about it. He said his electric bill was murderous. Must tell Franklin to have a power program. But I must let him think it was his own idea.

* * * *

March 3. The girl who served my breakfast this morning said she is a farmer's daughter. Her old man is hard up and she sends him half her wages. Tipped her a quarter, but it was worth it because a sort of farm program popped into my mind which I must submit to FDR. (N. B. Wallace and Rex later got all the credit.)

* * * *

April 12. Three panhandlers stopped me on Sixty-fifth street today. Gave the first one a quarter, the next one a dime, the third one a nickel. Times must be getting tough. Must impress Frank with the need for some kind of a relief program. (Note: Glad to let Harry Hopkins get all the glory.)

* * * *

May 22. Drove out in the country to buy a couple of dozen eggs. Saw a young fellow chopping down a tree. Might suggest to FDR a plan for a lot of CCC camps to get the young men away from the pool halls and out in God's great outdoors among the poison ivy.

"—birth of the TNEC inquiry."

June 19. My taxi driver, one of these tough Chicago toughs, was grousing today about the rich people and their limousines always bashing his fenders. Must tell Franklin to put something in his speeches about how awful it is that some people are richer than others.

* * * *

August 4. Heard a girl at a cocktail party describe one of the young men as "the sort of a man girls forget." Perhaps Franklin should put something in his speeches about the forgotten men. Would go over big with men who are sorry for themselves.

* * * *

Dec. 15. Saw a fine bank building today with a marble entrance which had been converted into a fruit and vegetable store. Maybe something ought to be done about the banks. Must drop FDR a memo. I must read a book on finance.

* * * *

April 1. Played London-bridge-is-falling-down with my little nephew today. His father is always razzing his mother about being more economical. It flashed into my mind that we ought to have a London economic conference. My nephew says his sister monopolizes all the toys. Maybe we ought to have an antimonopoly investigation, also. (Gosh, I didn't realize that was my own idea too!) You can verify these notes of Mr. Moley's after I have turned them over to the Smithsonian.

Bill to Deport Aliens Vetoed By Roosevelt

Provision for Narcotic Addicts Too Harsh, President Declares

President Roosevelt vetoed the Stannes alien deportation bill yesterday, maintaining that its penalties for alien spies and saboteurs were "superfluous" and that its application to narcotic addicts was too harsh.

The bill would require the deportation of alien spies, saboteurs, narcotic peddlers and addicts.

The text of the veto message follows:

To the House of Representatives:

I am returning herewith, without my approval, a bill (H. R. 6724) "to provide for the prompt deportation of aliens engaging in espionage or sabotage, alien criminals, and other undesirable aliens."

This bill provides for the deportation of three classes of aliens, irrespective of whether they entered the United States before or after passage of the act.

In the first group are aliens who have been convicted or have voluntarily admitted in writing that they have engaged in espionage or sabotage affecting the national defense or the foreign relations of the United States, since entering into the United States.

I am in full accord with the view that the Government should be empowered to deal firmly and effectively with persons guilty of espionage or sabotage. With that end in view, several months ago I instructed the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to coordinate and take charge of the investigation of offenses of this character, in conjunction with the military and naval intelligence services. A few days ago I approved a bill that substantially increased the maximum penalties that may be imposed on persons convicted of such crimes. Ample authority is found in the existing law for the deportation of aliens guilty of such activities, for the Secretary of Labor is already authorized to deport them if, after hearing, it is found that they are undesirable residents of the United States (U. S. Code, Title 8, Section 157). Further legislation on this subject appears to be unnecessary and superfluous.

The second group of aliens to which the bill relates are those who, at any time, have been convicted of a violation of any Federal or State narcotic law. At present, only such alien narcotic violators are subject to deportation as have been convicted under Federal statutes. I have no criticism of this provision of the bill.

The third group of aliens whose mandatory deportation would be required, if this bill were approved, comprises those who at any time, either before or after the passage of the act, have been lawfully committed to a public or private institution as habitual users of narcotic drugs. While severe treatment should properly be meted out to purveyors of narcotics, enlightened consideration of the entire subject inescapably leads to the conclusion that this principle does not necessarily apply to the unfortunate addicts of drugs, who do not participate in peddling them to others. Addiction to narcotics is to be regarded as a lamentable disease, rather than as a crime.

It does not seem clear why aliens who acquire this weakness should be singled out for deportation. The rigor and harshness of the proposal is enhanced by making no distinction between aliens who acquire the habit after their arrival in this country and those who had it previously; between aliens who are cured of the habit as a result of treatment in an institution and those who prove incurable; or between those who have been treated in such institutions at some time in the past and those who may be committed to institutions hereafter. It is not improbable that the mandatory character of this legislation, coupled with its retroactive features, as well as lack of consideration for persons who are cured after treatment, may result in hardship not commensurate with the benefits to be derived from this legislation by the community.

In the light of these considerations, I am constrained to return this bill without my approval.

C. I. O. Leaders Arrive to Map Battle on NLRA Amendments

Union Chieftains to Direct Attack on Norton, Smith Proposals; Green Commends Congresswoman for Her Labor Program

Under orders of John L. Lewis, their chieftain, representatives of national and international unions in the Congress of Industrial Organizations assembled in the Capital yesterday to map the C. I. O. fight on both the Norton and Smith proposed amendments to the Wagner Act.

Major opposition will center on the craft union amendment offered by the House Labor Committee head by Representative Mary Norton, the C. I. O. said. It charged the amendment would force the National Labor Relations Board "to hold elections and grant certification of craft unit splinter groups in industrially organized plants," even where industrial union contracts have been in force for years.

John T. Jones, president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, has been named by Lewis to direct the activities of the group called here.

Opposed "Steamroller"

Jones said the union spokesmen would remain here "until the Wagner Act is out of danger," and will oppose "all efforts to steamroller" any of the amendments through Congress "under a gag rule."

At the same time, President William Green, of the rival American Federation of Labor, made public a letter to Mrs. Norton commending her for inclusion of the craft union proposal in her committee's proposed changes.

He said the provision was taken "word for word" from the New York State Labor Relations Act, and that in 4,760 cases handled by the State Labor Relations Board "there has not been one single contest" of that provision either before the board or in court.

Asks NLRA Change

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 8.—H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, called tonight for changes in the National Labor Relations Act he said are necessary "to prevent government by blackjack."

"With that act," he declared in a speech to industrialists from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, "came not peace but a sword."

The N. A. M. president told the assembled industrialists that three groups oppose a "thorough overhauling" of the act:

1. Labor organizations which the act "has armed with clubs while it was chaining balls to the ankles of employers."

2. "Bureaucrats and job holders . . . who want to prolong their spree."

3. Politicians "playing both ends against the middle."

Wagner Act amendments proposed in a bill by Chairman Mary Norton of the House Labor Committee are a "red herring" and would "make little difference," Prentis asserted. The only way to amend the act properly, he said, is to make the changes suggested by the Smith investigating committee.

Dies Dares 'Plot-Makers' To Risk Open

Undercover Schemers Are Invited to Make Their Identity Known

Undercover advocates of subversive schemes and plots were challenged to "come out in the open" yesterday by Chairman Martin Dies of the special House committee investigating un-American activities.

He told a meeting of the Sisterhood of the Tifereth Israel Congregation at the Mayflower Hotel that "the United States Government has only just begun its fight against evils which threaten the foundations of democracy."

Meanwhile, the House voted contempt citations against three more Communists for failure to answer questions before the Dies committee.

Dismissal to Be Asked

Those named were Thomas F. P. O'Dea and Philip Frankfeld, both of Boston, and Albert Blumberg, of Baltimore. Having been previously charged with contempt in warrants issued by United States Commissioner Neeham C. Turnage, O'Dea and Frankfeld will face Justice Letts in District Court at 10 a. m. today for a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus.

They contend the earlier charges were improperly brought and will seek to have the warrants dismissed.

O'Dea, it was charged, refused to give the committee the names of Young Communist League members at Harvard; Frankfeld declined to answer any questions because the committee refused to permit him to read a statement denouncing it and Blumberg refused to identify Communist Party members or discuss party records.

Similar contempt citations were recently approved against James H. Dolsen and George Powers, Pittsburgh Communists.

West Coast Citizens Called

Chairman Dies announced last night that committee subpenas had been issued for a number of persons living in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, but declined to name them or discuss the matter further.

He conferred at length yesterday with Magistrate Jacob Dogole, of Philadelphia, who issued search warrants which resulted in the seizure of Communist Party records for the committee. He refused any comment.

John Patrick Walsh, Philadelphia attorney, who also attended the conference, said he was "satisfied with the results."

"We had an understanding," he told reporters. "It is awfully important we act in a certain way."

Dogole Wants Records

Before leaving Philadelphia, however, Magistrate Dogole indicated he wished the seized records to be returned to his jurisdiction.

At yesterday's meeting of the Sisterhood of Tifereth Israel Congregation, Dies denounced the "undercover and underhanded" methods employed by leaders of subversive activities.

"Let them come out in the open with their activities," said Dies, "for if they don't, we intend to force them out."

Operating under various disguises throughout the country, he told the meeting, are organizations masquerading in the name of American patriotism, but with moves dictated by foreign powers.

A mathematics lesson for Government employes facing loss of their jobs is offered in the latest bulletin of the Society for Personnel Administration.

C. W. Palmer, personnel officer for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, HOLC, and the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, described the problems of seperating employes in an agency which is steadily reducing its staff, and offered this formula as a guide:

Efficiency, 78 per cent; seniority, 7 per cent; potentiality, 7 per cent; versatility, 5 per cent, and economic circumstances, 3 per cent.

While these factors are made the basis for deciding who should be discharged, Palmer explained there are further safeguards to prevent any employe from being victimized by a mathematical formula.

"It is recognized that the problem of a major reduction in force cannot be solved in a mass-production fashion or through mechanical processes, but must largely be handled on an individual case basis," said Palmer.

For this reason, after the mathematics is worked out, exceptions are made from the regular separation order, "where good and sufficient reason exists." Up-to-date ratings and an open opportunity for workers to discuss their own ratings with superiors, he said, have brought confidence in the system.

Since the height of HOLC operations in 1934 the staff has been cut from 22,000 to about 10,000, and, according to Palmer, "very few appeals have been filed in spite of the staggering number of reductions made."

Beyond the task of cutting down the staff, the personnel program has extended to the problem of finding new jobs for discharged employes, through individual advice, employment committees to pool information about other jobs, contacts with private business, and a "follow-up" program. During the last five months, he said, the program has found new jobs for 50 per cent of discharged employes.

Palmer declared that work of this kind can best be handled by the agency, rather than through the Civil Service Commission.

Henry T. Hunt, former general counsel of the PWA, has been appointed principal hearings examiner for the wage-hour division.

Senate Group Cuts 55 Million Off Army Bill

Rivers and Harbors, Flood Control Raise Are Eliminated

Congressional economy forces scored yesterday in the tug-o'-war over Government expenditures as the Senate Appropriations Committee eliminated a $55,000,000 increase in funds for civil operations of the War Department.

The committee reversed the action of its subcommittee, which increased rivers and harbors projects by $25,000,000 and voting $30,000,000 additional for flood control, keeping 1941 funds for these purposes at the level recommended by President Roosevelt and voted by the House.

At the same time, $15,000,000 in cash and $99,000,000 in contract authorization for starting a new set of bomb-proof Panama Canal locks was voted. The project, recommended by the President, had been defeated in the House but was restored by the subcommittee.

Budget Explanation Asked

In another development, the Senate called upon the Bureau of the Budget to explain just how it plans to cut $700,000,000 from the capital of Government lending agencies. President Roosevelt suggested the reduction in his budget message, but Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said repeated requests to the Budget Bureau had failed to produce information.

Majority Leader Barkley clashed briefly with Byrd over a statement in the resolution that "repeated requests" for the information "have been denied" by the budget director. The former asked that this be eliminated, but when Byrd refused to amend the measure, the Senate voted approval of Byrd's resolution.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who is in charge of the War Department civil functions supply bill, said about $1,250,000 had been added for rivers and harbors maintenance. He revealed that action on the bill had been completed except for a decision on a House-approved bar to the employment of aliens in the Canal Zone. The Administration has asked defeat of this proviso on the ground it would violate a treaty with the Republic of Panama.

Close to Estimates

Should the Senate approve its committee's recommendation, the measure will conform closely to President Roosevelt's budget estimates. The House cut $16,600,000 from the $220,000,000 recommended in the budget for Army civil functions, voting $66,700,000 for rivers and harbors, $70,000,000 for general flood control and $30,000,000 for Mississippi River flood protection.

Backers of the navigation and flood projects promise to take their fight for larger funds to the floor. The amount voted is well below current appropriations and will permit only continuance of existing flood control work, as against 17 new projects scattered over 23 States voted by the subcommittee.

The net score on Congressional reductions below the President's budget now stands at about $113,000,000. Economies totaling about $300,000,000 voted early in the session had shrunk to zero last week with the $55,000,000 boost in the Army civil functions bill in subcommittee. Then the House cut the Army military bill $68,000,000 and yesterday's action further raised the savings total.

No steps have been taken in Congress to either vote the $460,000,000 in additional taxes which President Roosevelt said would be necessary to stay within the legal debt limit or to enlarge that limit. Leaders have tried to cut the budget by $460,000,000.

Townsend Plan Review Wins Senate Favor

Members Indicate Approval of Proposal To Weigh Program

A proposal for a Senate committee study of the Townsend old-age pension plan and a review of the operations of the present Social Security Act won bipartisan support in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, made the proposal, contending that the present old-age pension system "is a futile, idle, worthless law." He asked that the Senate Finance Committee investigate and report to Congress on the system and on the Townsend plan.

Clark Commends Plan

Several Senators offered encouragement to the Californian. Senators Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, expressed the hope that Downey would obtain an early and complete hearing on the question.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, said he thought the Townsend plan was the only one extant which "promises to keep money in circulation and keep the productive plant of the Nation at anywhere near capacity without the vicious counterpart of going into debt."

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, broke in to inquire what was being done about the Townsend movement, and Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, suggested that Downey's proposal for a special study be submitted directly to the Senate without the delay of reference to a committee.

Ashurst Expresses Praise

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, said he wished to commend the legislation containing the Townsend plan "to the Senate and to the country." He said he believed Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the Townsend pension movement, had "hit upon a truth that may be the solution of the financial problems of this country—no appropriation without a tax to accompany it."

At one point, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, interrupted Downey to comment that the social security program entails "horrible discrimination against the less privileged."

The First Step
IN ESTABLISHING CREDIT

Some day you will need credit, and when you do you are likely to need it greatly. But credit cannot grow overnight. It must be cultivated and carefully nurtured.

The first step in establishing credit is to open a savings account. Many individuals did that years ago, and with the cooperation of their bank have grown and developed until today they are rated as highly successful.

Character is the stuff of which credit is made. Regular saving helps to develop character. Begin at once. It is easy to have a savings account here.

Socialists Ask 'Plenty, Peace And Freedom'

Convention Ends As Thomas Plans $100,000 Campaign

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Socialist Party adjourned its twenty-second national convention here yesterday after adopting a platform offering the Nation "plenty, peace and freedom."

Norman Thomas, erstwhile Presbyterian clergyman, who was nominated for President for the fourth time Sunday, brought the convention to a close with what he called a "benediction."

"This," he said, "is going to be a campaign that America will remember."

Plan $100,000 Campaign

He and his 34-year-old running mate, Prof. Maynard C. Krueger, of Chicago University, were prepared for a vigorous $100,000 campaign, blithely heedless of the fact that they will wind up a poor third behind the two big parties.

The Young Socialists, unable to count on political jobs like the Young Democrats and Young Republicans, scattered for their homes in the same crusading spirit as their nominees.

In the dying moments of the convention, Nominee Thomas was trying to find a resolution excoriating Soviet Russia for having betrayed democratic socialism by setting up a totalitarian state. It could not be found.

Greeting to Finns

However, the convention did adopt one in which it paid its respects to Stalin's Russia in scorching fashion. Addressed to the workers of Finland, it said:

"We greet the heroic, though decimated, working class of Finland, which has resisted with all its strength the imperialistic attack, led by a war-mongering, blood-thirsty tyrant, of the ruthless Russian totalitarian state."

Contemporary Pan American Art on Display at Corcoran

Showing Opens Week's Celebration Of Union's Founding

The exhibition of contemporary Pan American art at the Corcoran Gallery attracted considerable attention yesterday as the 50th anniversary of the Pan American Union's founding, celebrated nationally this week, was opened.

Many events are scheduled for the next seven days to memorialize the organization's half century of progress and the solidarity of the ties between this country and the Latin American nations. Next Monday President Roosevelt will address the Union's governing board at noon in the Pan American Building.

After the address, the President will be host at a White House luncheon to the Latin American ambassadors and ministers comprising the governing board.

The art exhibit continues through this week, as will an exhibit of orchids in the Pan American Building patio. A stamp exhibit opens today at the building. A "Music of the Americas" program will be offered in the building at 8:30 tonight. Participating will be the glee clubs from George Washington, American, Maryland and Howard universities, and musical groups from the Peabody Conservatory of Music and Goucher College, Baltimore.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union, will be awarded the 1940 gold medal of the Arbitration Commission Friday at a ceremony to be held in the patio at noon. At 1 p. m. the governing board will be tendered a luncheon at the Carleton Hotel by the Pan American Society of New York. A dinner dance will be given for the board Saturday evening at the National Press Club, and on Sunday at 11 a. m. a Pan American mass will be celebrated at Catholic University.

Patricia Donovan Killed in Wreck

Wiprud, secretary of the District Medical Society, at Duke University, Durham, N. C. She left yesterday morning to drive back to Washington.

Her brother, David, immediately hastened from Washington to the bedside. Col. Donovan, who was in New York, raced to the Capital by train when the weather grounded aircraft, and continued on to Fredericksburg by auto.

David reached the bedside before his sister died. A Quantico clergyman administered the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Col. Donvoan arranged to have the body of his daughter sent to the Gawler funeral home in Washington.

Friends of the family said it would take several weeks to inform Mrs. Donovan of the tragic news. She is on a cruise aboard the Yankee en route from Honolulu to Samoa.

Patricia made her debut in New York City three years ago. She attended Potomac School and Rosemary Hall in Connecticut before entering Wellesley College, where she studied for two years and then transferred to George Washington University here.

Attractive, popular, and a brilliant student, Miss Donovan was majoring at G. W. U. in "American Thought and Civilization" and would have received her B. A. degree in June. She was a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. In 1937 she took a voyage around the world.

Col. Donovan, Washington and New York lawyer, served as Assistant Attorney General during the Coolidge Administration. In the World War he earned the soubriquet of "Wild Bill" through action on the front with the "Fighting Sixty-Ninth." He was the only soldier to win all three highest military honors for American heroes—Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross and Distinguished Service Medal.

Christian Front Witness Tells Of Wide Plot

Testifying for U. S., He Says Defendants Planned Slayings

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—Dennis Healy, a Government witness of mysterious background, today attributed to some among the 17 men on trial for seditious conspiracy a long series of prospective acts of violence, including the suggested assassination of a dozen Congressmen and the establishment of a temporary dictatorship under such a man as Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, retired.

Testifying as an informer, and termed an "agent provocateur" by the defense, Healy showed at times a poor memory.

He declared under cross-examination that he was not certain just where he was born and acknowledged that he had been "a big bluff" in his association with the alleged conspirators.

Depicts Wide Plot

Nevertheless, referring frequently to notes, he presented a picture of widespread machinations against the established order of projected bombings, rioting, the setting up of barricades and the seizure at machine gun point of public buildings.

One defendant, William Gerald Bishop, the witness declared, had said he thought Moseley would be "all right" to head a temporary dictatorship to be accomplished after the United States Government had been overthrown.

As to the projected killing of selected politicians, Healy swore that John F. Cassidy another defendant, had declared that the Christian Front, of which he was a member, "could not openly advocate shooting any Congressmen, but that he himself would advocate shooting 12 Congressmen to show them that the Christian Front meant business."

Doubtful of Birthplace

Healy attributed anti-Semitic remarks to Macklin Boettger as defendant, and others, and acknowledged that he himself once had "faked a fight" to indicate to action committee members that he was anti-Semitic.

"One or two members suggested it would be nice to have a Jewish nose on the President's head for a target," the witness said. "I told them I thought it would be nice to have Morgenthau."

"Our Secretary of the Treasury?" asked defense counsel.

"I had to carry out my role," Healy answered obliquely.

He admitted on cross-examination that in registering to vote here in 1933 he had listed Canada as his place of birth whereas he didn't know where he was born, except that it was "somewhere in the British Empire."

'Come and See for Yourself'

Little Signs That Weren't There Save Driver From Parking Fine

62 Get Tickets 'Adjusted' Including Congressman, Fire Chief, 4 Diplomatic Aides And a Gob Who Sailed to China

A little low comedy last week leavened the serious police business of fixing traffic tickets.

Main source of innocent merriment was Walter F. Klein, of 116 Twelfth street southeast, who was saved from a parking ticket by the little signs that weren't there.

Klein, a recent arrival from Milwaukee, Wis., was one of 62 persons, including a Congressman, a fire chief and four diplomatic aides, who had tickets "adjusted" by police last week. The list was released by police yesterday under order of the Commissioners.

"What? No Signs?"

Charged with parking in the 300 block of M street southeast, a restricted area, Klein poked his head into the fifth Precinct Station and pleaded that there was no punishment to fit his crime. In fact, he said, there was no crime. He saw no no-parking signs.

"What? No signs?" the desk sergeant demanded. "There's a sign on almost every tree in that block!"

"Maybe I'm blind," Klein replied, shrugging his shoulders. "Come out and see for yourself."

When he reached the corner the sergeant stopped, pinched his arm, rubbed his eyes. No signs! What's more: no trees!

The Sailor Sailed Away

Then there was the sailor who had sailed away, leaving police to hold the ticket. Henry B. Longaker, of the Navy Yard Receiving Ship, received a warning for parking too close to a corner. His ticket bore this notation:

"This man has been transferred to China; ticket brought in by a sailor from the Navy Yard."

Jack H. Reiner, of Baltimore, Md., ticketed for parking beside a fire plug, amazed police by thanking them fervently. The reason, as revealed by the cancellation note on the back of his ticket, was:

"Attempt made to steal auto. Same was moved to fire plug. Papers stolen."

Receives Warning

Marvin M. Balderson, of 435 Sixteenth street southeast, a truck driver, received a warning at the request of Representative Nat Patton (Democrat), of Texas. Patton explained to The Post:

"Balderson works for a poor old widow woman, Mrs. William L. Walters, of 211 Delaware avenue southwest. I'd intercede for a poor old widow woman any time."

Mrs. Walters, who is 38, told The Post that Balderson is one of the six employes of a floor refinishing concern she has operated since her husband's death two years ago. She is also resident manager of the apartment house in which Patton's son resides.

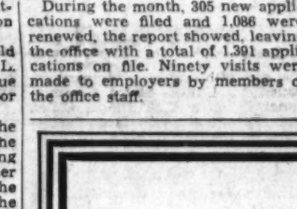
"The Congressman's son is a very good friend of mine," she said.

"Poor Balderson. He didn't know he was breaking the law. He parked the truck near a parking meter beside the District Building. We didn't know that commercial vehicles aren't allowed to stop there.

"I know ignorance of the law can't save you but . . ."

Claim Cars Pushed

Five violators pleaded successfully that their cars were pushed after they parked; four were strangers in the city, unfamiliar with the regulations; five said their cars were disabled; six claimed they had just parked momentarily, and eight had previous good records.



Fire Chief J. B. Sims, of the Fifth Battalion, received a warning for parking in a loading zone with the notation: "Inspector Holmes" (Traffic Inspector William E. Holmes). Milton C. Steuber, of 3720 Benton street northwest, was excused for parking over time with the notation: "Maj. and Supt." (Police Chief Ernest W. Brown).

Those with diplomatic connections who were pardoned included Hugo Gauthier, of the Brazilian Embassy; Salvador L. Duhart, of 2651 Sixteenth street northwest, employed at the Mexican Embassy; Bert Nisonen, of the Finnish Legation, and Mlle. Marie J. Jerry, of the French Embassy.

Of the 62 violators pardoned last week, 51 received warnings in lieu of punishment; 11 had their tickets canceled outright.

451 Get Jobs Through Office In Alexandria

Four hundred and fifty-one placements were made by the Alexandria office of the Virginia State Employment Service during March, according to a report submitted yesterday by Carter W. Friend, district manager. The office serves Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William counties.

Thirteen positions were obtained on jobs undertaken with public funds, Friend said. The remaining 438 were in private industry, including building construction, business establishments and private homes.

During the month, 305 new applications were filed and 1,086 were renewed, the report showed, leaving the office with a total of 1,391 applications on file. Ninety visits were made to employers by members of the office staff.

Stelle Attempts To Take Chair As Governor

Illinois Candidate To Succeed Horner 'Calls' Legislature

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., April 8.— Lieut. Gov. John Stelle proclaimed himself "acting Governor" in a melodramatic move today, but ailing Gov. Henry Horner refused to relinquish the reins of the State government.

While the battle for the gubernatorial powers excited the capital, State Representative A. Andrew Torrence, colored, was slashed and shot to death in his Chicago campaign headquarters in another startling prelude to tomorrow's primary elections in Illinois. His assailant, Cornelius Woodward, colored, collapsed and died before he could make a statement.

These sensational developments diverted attention for the time being from the impending Presidential primaries, pitting President Roosevelt against Vice President Garner on the Democratic side, with Thomas E. Dewey in a solo act in the Republican ranks.

Lieut. Gov. Stelle, insurgent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, strode into the Governor's statehouse office, seated himself at a secretary's desk, and issued the proclamation. He signed himself "acting Governor," and called the Legislature into special session April 30—the same date listed in a similar call by Gov. Horner filed less than an hour earlier.

Stelle told reporters he was assuming the Governor's duties under the disability clause of the State constitution. He contended Horner had been ill for 18 months and that his power had been "usurped" by State Finance Director Nudelman and other "back room bosses."

While the lieutenant governor prepared to leave for Chicago, Attorney General Cassidy termed Stelle's action "absolutely null and void."

Gov. Horner, confined to the executive mansion by illness, stated "I will continue to serve as Governor" and declared Stelle's "pathetic antics" should evoke "pity rather than censure." He described Stelle as a "desperate and defeated man."

Stelle announced that he was "discharging" Nudelman, State finance director. Nudelman disclosed that he was "ignoring" Stelle.

Stelle is running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against Harry B. Hershey, entrant backed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, National Committeeman P. A. Nash and Gov. Horner.

Dr. Kreps Outlines Technical Gains

time, the real need of industry is not more capacity—it is more market," he declared.

Benefits of the machine, Dr. Kreps said, must be distributed to the consumer in the form of lower prices. "No industry should even pretend to boast it has made technical progress except as it measures such progress in terms of the lower prices it quotes to consumers," he asserted.

While envisaging an "America unlimited" in the future, Dr. Kreps warned that "monopoly in its various forms in the United States is the enemy of democracy." It is necessary, he said, that there shall be "no concentration and exercise of economic power" without consent of the governed, if the Nation is to enjoy the full fruits of technological advance.

Dr. Kreps was followed to the witness stand by Watson Davis, director of Science Service.

With the opening remark that "science and the organized knowledge of the world seem to be proceeding at an accelerating rate," Davis embarked on a survey of eight "highly significant fields" for future research and invention, including photosynthesis, atomic power, long-range weather forecasting, synthetic materials, chemical cures of disease, genetics, human relations and mobilization of scientific knowledge.

Davis' testimony was left unfinished until today, when C. F. Kettering, of General Motors, and William Green of the A. F. of L., are scheduled to appear.

At the close of yesterday's hearings Chairman O'Mahoney observed the facts show that "modern technological advance is the result of group activity."

In decrying the "pathological" complaint that frontiers are gone forever, Dr. Kreps told the committee that a different kind of frontier remains to be developed in the United States, just as it has been developed in Sweden, England and other countries with a high living standard. Terming it an "intensive" frontier—as opposed to "extensive"—he said it consists of "the needs and will to progress" of a nation's citizens.

Dr. Kreps foresaw a danger to democracy in the pressure groups growing out of a highly industrialized society. "Technology," he pointed out, "has created large economic governments, each commanding in detail the works of hundreds of thousands of laborers, collecting billions of dollars annually in that interesting type of taxes euphemistically called prices."

In describing the enormous technological advances of the last 20 years, Dr. Kreps said the "most significant" were inventions or improvements designed to save capital. These "capital-saving inventions," he said, have brought enormous economies in costs.

With the aid of charts and statistics, Dr. Kreps showed that fixed capital investment was 2 per cent greater in 1936-37 than in 1923-24, while volume of output was up 25 per cent, production of labor had jumped over 40 per cent, and unit wage cost had dropped 22 per cent.

Parade of Patent Progress Jams Commerce Department

Evelyn Birrell demonstrates a model of an electric furnace which makes stainless steel. This is one of the many seldom-heard-of gadgets on display in "The Parade of Inventions" in the Commerce Building Auditorium

The unromantic Commerce Department crashed through last night with a show that's stupendous and collosal and it packed them in. They call it "A Parade of Inventions" and it has everythnig from the newest false teeth to sex appeal.

Offered as a highlight in the United States Patent Law Sesquicentennial, the parade fills the lobby and auditorium and every tiem of a feature attraction. It stays on through this week and Sunday.

There is a page from the Gutenberg Bible, printed about 1450; the evolution of the stocking; a Roman straight razor dating from the Fourth Century, A. D., and the newest electric razors; the trans-Atlantic receiver Marconi used when the letter 'S" sputtered through in code; a miniature dial telephone system with all workings visible, the complicated system that removed the "number please" from American life; an alnico magnet capable of lifting objects 3,000 times its own weight; an electro magnet livitator that raises a piece of aluminum so that it appears to float in mid-air, and a brunette modelling the latest patented rubber thread bathing suit. The show's a wow.

It's like the world's fairs and can't be seen in an evening. But there is the original model of the mill built by Paul Revere in 1802 which rolled the first American sheet copper; all manner of airplane, camera, firearms, telephone, automobile and electrical developments, along with a patented hairbrush so transparent of top that the quantity of brushed up dandruff would be visible. Hard by, the Army Ordnance Department displays latest antitank and anti-aircraft weapons. Farther down the auditorium, a beautiful girl sits on a patented matress.

Roosevelt, Dewey Face Test Today

convention drive, and clinch the young New Yorker's early lead.

The Garner and Vandenberg people point out that in Illinois and Nebraska the Presidential primaries amount to little more than a popularity contest since delegates from neither State are bound by primary returns.

Closely watched and compared will be the size of the total votes cast in the Illinois and Nebraska Republican as against the Democratic primaries.

As in Wisconsin, Illinois votes cast for Garner will be counted as third term protests. Draft movement opponents will claim that the Garner vote plus the total Republican ballot point a November licking for any third term try. Supporters of the Texan held out little hope that a factional rift in the Illinois Democratic organization would reflect itself in substantial Garner vote gains.

Interested spectator in today's voting is Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who has kept out of the primaries. He would stand to profit if Vandenberg is eliminated from the Presidential race. Should Dewey sweep both States, forging too far into the G. O. P. lead, a new "stop Dewey" movement is expected to center around the Ohioan.

As if in answer to a recent statement by Dewey that he did all of the speaking for his family, Taft headquarters announced yesterday that the Senator's attractive wife, Martha, will begin a seven-State stump-speaking tour for Taft in Boston on Thursday, winding up with four speeches in Indiana the following week.

Aside from the Presidential race, aspects of Nebraska voting claiming close attention today include:

A special Congresssional election in Nebraska's First District, between Hyde Sweet, Nebraska City Republican, and Charles A. DeFoe, Tecumseh Democrat, for the vacant House seat of the late Represenetative Heinke, Republican. A victory for Sweet would be heralded as bearing out earlier Ohio and Iowa G. O. P. Congressional election trend. Should Dafoe win, Democrats will claim that the Republican tide manifest earlier has been turned.

A close fight for Nebraska's Democratic senatorial nomination between Senator Edward R. Burke and Gov. R. L. Cochran. Burke, on record against a third term and an anti-New Deal court plan opponent, is in the fight of his life with a Governor committed to New Deal policies.

Other political developments yesterday:

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, queried Benjamin Adamowski, Illinois Democratic senatorial candidate, on whether "many census takers in Illinois are being forced to do political work for Kelly-Nash and Nudeiman organizations and that the Hatch Clean Politics Act is being openly violated." Tobey said he was advised that Adamowski, opposing Senator Slattery for the nomination, made such charges.

Senator Tobey, meanwhile denied that he was opposing his colleague, Senator Bridges, New Hampshire's "favorite son" Republican, for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination. Tobey said he was uncommitted to anyone, but would vote for the strongest Republican candidate put forward at the convention, adding: "If that happens to be Styles (Bridges) I will vote for him."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, called on the Democratic National Committee to reapportion convention delegates "to give fuller representation to those portions of the country which are more or less permanently Democratic." Clark recalled that the last Democratic convention went on record to this effect.

In Minneapolis, Federal Security Administrator McNutt, a Presidential candidate "if" the President doesn't run, attacked Dewey and told reporters the Democratic Party will not split if the President runs.

Effort to Rule Television Sets Denied by FCC

Fly Demands RCA Officials State View Of Inquiry's Conduct

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday disclaimed any intention of trying to regulate the sale of television receivers as it opened an inquiry into the promotional activities of the Radio Corporation of America in the infant industry.

As a battle for position opened between two powerful competitors in the television field, the RCA and the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Chairman Wheeler of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee scheduled a hearing for tomorrow morning on a Senate resolution to investigate the FCC's action in reopening the television case.

Senator Wheeler said that James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, and David Sarnoff, president of R. C. A., would be heard before the committee decides whether to report the FCC inquiry resolution introduced last week by Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Chairman Fly, smarting under a barrage of criticism directed at the FCC since it cracked down on R. C. A., interrupted the testimony of Allen B. Du Mont yesterday afternoon to demand of R. C. A. officials whether they considered the FCC had acted improperly or without jurisdiction.

When Frank W. Wozencroft, attorney for RCA, who was conducting the examination of Du Mont, declined either to "affirm or deny" the statement of the FCC chairman, Fly abruptly called upon Col. Manton Davis, R. C. A. vice president and general counsel, for a reply.

"Most certainly we do not challenge the jurisdiction of the commission to fix standards for television transmission," Davis said, "or to make any investigation or collect any facts that might be helpful in that connection."

Fly, in a statement read at the opening of the hearing, said that the commission would make "no effort to determine the legal propriety of the promotional activities of the industry" and "has no intention of adopting any rules as to the design or as to the marketing of receiving sets."

"It should be borne in mind that this is not a trial," he said.

With all indications pointing to the probability that the FCC would permit its former order spurring the development of television to stand, reports were current that President Roosevelt has suggested that the controversy be settled amicably and as promptly as possible.

Radio industry observers predicted the FCC's action might become a campaign issue as Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, joined in the Capitol Hill criticism of the commission and urged a Congressional investigation.

The FCC inquiry, enmeshed in a technical discussion of the respective advantages of the R. C. A. and the Du Mont systems of television transmission, was largely academic insofar as Washington was concerned.

Both companies, however, have applied to the FCC for a permit to construct a television station in Washington, and Du Mont, which is backed financially by Paramount Pictures, also is seeking to enter the New York field, where R. C. A.'s subsidiary, the National Broadcasting Co., is now operating a television station on regular schedule.

Gen. Marshall Asks Younger Army Officers

'Unfortunate Results' Might Follow If U. S. Gets in War, He Says

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, told the Senate Military Committee yesterday that many Army officers are too old for the field service required of their rank and warned that "very unfortunate" results might follow in case of war.

Rigorous war games held this winter have shown the need for younger leaders in command of troop units, the Army chief said. He urged that officers with World War experience be raised to positions of greater responsibility now rather than waiting until war comes and then jumping them to posts for which they have not been trained.

"In war much depends upon the individual officer," he declared. "Under the present setup officers would be so old and limited in experience in the upper ranks that it would be very unfortunate for them to assume high commands."

Marshall appeared with his chief, Secretary Harry H. Woodring, in support of a bill to promote 1,350 officers immediately and retire all but a few selected officers at the age of 60. The measure would substitute promotion after fixed years of service for the present system of advancement by seniority to fill vacancies.

"The veterans of the World War have grown old without corresponding increase in rank and positions of command to which their age and experience entitle them," Woodring testified.

"The morale of the service is adversely affected by the uncertainty of the situation of the senior group, and the future leadership of the Army is jeopardized by the hopeless plight of the officers behind the so-called war hump."

Gen. Marshall said that more officers failed to make good during the World War because of physical exhaustion than any other cause. During the hard test of continuous winter maneuvers the past few months, a number of experienced officers "fell down" physically when called upon to do jobs which should fall to younger men, he stated.

Rain-Swollen Potomac Rising; Maryland Areas Flooded

the foot of Wisconsin avenue northwest and near Sycamore Island above Key Bridge showed slight rises in the Potomac, upper reaches of the river's tributaries in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties in Maryland were flooding into low lands as the result of a rainfall measured by the bureau at 1.80 inches early last night.

Rock Creek went over its banks at the East West highway and swept its water across Beach drive at Rolling road. Paint Branch in Prince Georges County sent its overflow alongside University road near the Univeristy of Maryland.

In Washington, the Lincoln Memorial Pool was brimfull and slopping over in places as much as 6 feet from the edge with enough water to wet shoetops of pedestrians.

The Sycamore Island gauge was showing a rise of approximately one-fifth of a foot in six hours, but flood experts at the Weather Bureau said the higher water level was due principally to the "local runoff."

Washington experienced the heaviest rainfall of the Potomac basin, the bureau reported. At Elkins, W. Va., head of the Potomac watershed, rain stopped at noon and at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., the fall was less than a half-inch, the bureau said.

Wet and gloomy weather failed to affect the optimism of the supervisors of Washington's second industry who foresaw the spring tourist season reaching its peak this week-end. One official said the city would be visited by 200,000 tourists Saturday and Sunday.

Chief tourist magnet, the Japanese cherry blossoms along the Tidal Basin, are expected to be in full bloom by Friday. National Capital parks officials said yesterday the rain would have no "adverse" effect on the blossoms, but that two full days of sunshine would be needed to bring them out.

Plot to Block Danube Foiled, Reich Claims

British Planned to Sink Barges, Close Channel To Rumania, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, April 8.—Detention of a fleet of dynamite laiden British barges, charged by Germans with being designated to blow up a narrow Danube gateway and block a German supply line, today electrified southeast Europe with the fear war soon might spread to this quarter of the world.

Rumanian police, acting on a tip said to have been supplied by the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, halted the fleet near Giurgiu, Danube River port whence Germany ships much needed Rumanian oil supplies.

Aboard were tons of dynamite Germans alleged the British planned to blockade the spot in the Danube known as the Iron Gate by sinking the barges and wrecking the narrow channel where the river cuts through the Carpathian barrier, between high cliffs. The Iron Gate is 280 miles up river from Giurgiu, and about 60 mues upstream from the junction of the Rumanian, Bulgarian and Yugoslav frontiers.

All river shipping must pass through the Iron Gate.

Official British quarters, acknowledging the barges were loaded with explosives, insisted they were to be used only for destroying Allied river craft in case of a German invasion of Rumania.

The only official British statement on the matter was a communique saying merely that Rumanian authorities had seized two cases of firearms which a British barge captain had neglected to declare in passing customs.

Two hundred Rumanian and Yugoslav soldiers armed with machine guns tonight were guarding the gateway where the Danube forms the boundary between Rumania and Yugoslavia. Giurgiu was turned into a military zone by the Rumanian army which banned all entries without special permits.

The German version of the seizure, said to have taken place Saturday, reported more than 100 British army, navy and air force men, who were to have participated in the coup, had been arrested.

Nazi Freighter Runs Blockade In Adriatic

Carries Bauxite Cargo to Trieste In Uneventful Trip

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 8.—The German freighter Ankara arrived safely at Trieste today with 5,000 tons of bauxite from Yugoslavia, carried through Yugoslav and Italian territorial waters on a test trip which Germans hoped would open up a new blockade-puncturing route for war supplies.

British warships were believed to be in the Adriatic and had been reported planning to halt such a shipment, but the Ankara, which left Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, yesterday, reached Trieste after what her captain described as an uneventful trip. He said no British naval vessels were sighted.

Raises German Hopes

Germany hopes that eventually supplies may be carried through neutral territorial waters from points as far away as Russia's Black Sea oil ports. Once the goods reach Trieste, they may be transshipped to Germany by rail.

Bauxite, mineral base of aluminum, is regarded by Britain as war material and therefore contraband, although Yugoslavia does not regard it as a war supply.

Gen. Umberto Favagrossa, Italy's commissioner general for war manufacturers, informed Premier Mussolini today that more than 700,000 workers now are employed in the manufacture of war materials.

Gen. Favagrossa said 929 auxiliary factories now are controlled by the war manufacturers' board.

Adriatic Blockade Feared

Belgrade, April 8 (AP).—Official quarters declared today Yugoslavia would act jointly with Italy in case the Allies blockade the Adriatic or lay mines there.

The British announcement that mines had been laid in Norwegian territorial waters stirred sharp anxiety that the Allies might extend their operations to the Adriatic.

Officials here pointed out that Italy controls both sides of the narrow straits of Otranto which is the only entrance to the Adriatic.

Coast Guns Repel 4 Warships Trying to Force Way Into Oslo Fjord

drowning 300 of the 500 men in German army uniform aboard.

Amid heavy burst of cannon fire from the warships, one of which was reported to be a heavy cruiser, an air battle was reported to have taken place between Norwegian planes and foreign fighting aircraft above the dark gorge of Oslo Fjord.

Oslo itself was blacked out, the city's communications with all Norway having been cut by censorship, the country's radio stations silenced, and the lighthouses darkened.

Oslo, however, was reported to have experienced an air raid alarm for an hour at the time of the naval cannonade.

Neutral Norway had not fought a battle since 1814 but she can back up her expressed determination to fight for neutrality with an army of 75,000 men, an air force of between 200 and 300 modern warplanes, and a navy of 50 small coast defense vessels totaling less than 35,000 tons.

The population of less than 3,000,000 probably could turn out less than 200,000 reserves.

Norway's army is built around a nucleus of 2,000 professional commissioned and noncommissioned officers. Military service is compulsory for all males.

The largest ships of the navy are two 4,000-ton vessels, one 40 and the other 43 years old. Each mounts two 8.2-inch guns.

The air force is an army of the army and includes some motors and parts purchased from the United States.

The attack, which took place about 12:20 a. m. (6:30 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.), and was over within a short time, was marked by heavy bursts of cannon fire. The invaders were said to have retired into the darkness.

Details of the accompanying air battle were not at once known but apparently the invading planes were driven off.

Difficulties in obtaining details of the fighting were heightened by the fact that Norway snapped telephone communication with the rest of the world except for "state calls."

Persons who tried to place long distance calls to the Norwegian capital were told that only these official calls would be handled.

All telephone connections with Oslo were ended, apparently by Norwegian censorship, shortly after an air raid alarm of one hour was lifted at 1:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. Eastern standard time.)

Armada Seen Off Danish Island

Reliable Oslo sources said the Armada was made principally of trawlers and coast guard ships, but also included either of the 10,000 pocketbattleships, the Admiral Scheer or the Luetzow (formerly the Deutschland), and several heavy cruisers and many destroyers.

The fleet was apparently making slow progress out of the Baltic into the Skagerrak along Norway's south coast because of the lighthouse blackout. It was presumed the German fleet did not wish to approach the dangerous shores in darkness.

The reported approach of the fleet and the smashing aggressiveness of the British admiralty impressed all Scandinavia that it had the European war once more on its very doorstep, after a narrow escape from the Finnish-Russian conflict.

As mystifying as the advance of the German warships on their undisclosed mission was the sinking yesterday by a British submarine of the German troop transport but 4 miles off Norway's southern coast.

Five hundred German infantrymen, calvarymen and airmen were aboard and 300 of them were killed or drowned. Also lost were all the 80 horses aboard.

A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch, from Oslo also reported that possibly 200 men were lost when an unidentified ship sank yesterday after a violent explosion off Lillesand, on the Norwegian coast. Rescue craft found the sea covered with blazing oil. This may have been a reference to the troopship, however.

Heavy Firing Heard

No confirmation could be obtained of reports received at Lillesand, down the coast from here, that two German submarines had attacked an armed British vessel off the coast and that one submarine and the British ship had been sent to the bottom.

Nor was there confirmation of the report that two German submarines had been sunk.

Sounds of heavy firing out at sea were reported by residents along the shore of the Skagerrak during the day.

There also was the report of the German tanker Kreta that she had been attacked by a submarine but still was afloat off Faeder, southern Norway.

Norwegian officials said reports that the 12,000-ton German tanker Posidonia had been torpedoed and sunk grew out of the fact that the Kreta, apparently to conceal her identity, sent out the call letters of the Posidonia, which apparently still was afloat.

Telling of the sinking of the Rio de Janeiro, the surviving lookout was quoted as saying he did not see the British submarine until the explosion of a torpedo against the ship's hull. Other survivors said they thought the submarine was Norwegian until they saw the torpedo streaking through the water.

Ship Tries to Flee

Norwegian fishermen who were nearby, however, declared the British submarine signaled the Nazi ship to halt before it sank her.

When the Rio de Janeiro attempted to flee out of range the submarine loosed torpedoes, the fishermen declared.

As the stricken vessel heeled under the impact of the first torpedo, German soldiers started jumping into the icy waters of the Skagerrak.

Norwegian boats closed in to rescue the men struggling in the water, when a second torpedo struck the troopship, spraying a wide area with wreckage and killing many of the Germans. Uniforms on the Germans included those of the infantry, cavalry and air corps. Identification tags gave names, rank and military units of many of the dead. Most of them appeared to be between 20 and 27 years old.

Survivors to Be Questioned

A Norwegian patrol plane flying over the scene sped shoreward for aid and many fishing craft were sent out from Lillesand and Arendal.

Most of the survivors were landed near Lillesand, where many required hospital treatment. Others were guarded, awaiting internment.

Informed sources said the survivors undoubtedly would be questioned regarding the aims and the destination of the Rio de Janiero.

Baltic Troops Added

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 8.—It is revealed here today that German troops held in reserve on the shores of the Baltic have been increased of late in considerable proportions, especially in the vicinity of Rostock.

Ever since the Russians attacked Finland a number of German units had remained concentrated near the Baltic and it was ascertained that periodically they practiced embarking in and landing from transports. In recent days not only have such exercises become more frequent but the units engaging in them have been reinforced.

No deduction is being drawn from this information but it is underlined that developments in Scandinavia overshadow the military situation today and it is felt generally that their percussions may be far-reaching strategically as well as politically.

The opinion is growing in competent circles here that a decisive battle between the Rhine and Moselle is becoming less and less likely as months pass unless indeed the Allied blockade becomes so effective as to compel the enemy to attempt a mass sortie through the Westwall.

If the stalemate is not to continue on the Western Front the alternative would be to open new theaters of operations in the hope of provoking a general conflagration.

Simultaneously it is learned that great activity has been noted on air fields in western Germany including Kassel, Duesseldorf and Cologne.

It would appear that old-model airplanes are being sent to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland for policing purposes there, and are being replaced by more recent models either transferred from these countries or newly built. This refers to bombers as well as fighters.

Precautions Taken After 11 Graf Spee Officers Escape

Buenos Aires, April 8 (AP).—Well-informed sources said tonight that four or five German naval officers were being held incommunicado in the naval arsenal here after an attempt to resist internment with the rest of the officers of the scuttled German pocket battleship, Admiral Graf Spee.

A decree was published tonight establishing Martin Garcia Island as the internment zone to halt a string of Nazi escapes.

able to handle a certain amount of the mining output.

Chamberlain was believed to have conferred yesterday with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who earlier had received the Norwegian Minister, Erik Colban.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a short-wave broadcast picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting System, described the mine fields as jutting for some distance out into the ocean. The field at Stadtlandet, one of Norway's westernmost points, sticks out six miles from shore and covers about 45 square miles, the B. B. C. said. The one at Bud projects "10 or 11" miles into the ocean, and covers about 35 square miles, while that at Bodo, just south of Narvik, is the largest of all, a 100-square mile strip five miles wide and 20 miles long, according to the B. B. C.

(This last field "projects from the Norwegian coast in a northwesterly direction so as to leave a clear passage into West Fjord, but compelling ships to pass well outside the territorial waters," the B. B. C. said. Narvik lies at the head of West Fjord.))

Troopship's Sinking Carries War to Norway

Nation Protests To London, Paris On Mine Laying

By the Associated Press

Oslo, April 8.—The European war came to neutral Norway with smashing suddenness today as the British navy, only a few hours after sowing mines in Norwegian territorial waters, fired two torpedoes into a German transport just four miles off the southeast coast.

The reason for the German transport's presence in these waters was not immediately clear, but Norway realized with trepidation as the bodies of the German dead were tossed upon her shores of the historic Skagerrak that the war at last was at her door.

Earlier, Foreign Minister Koht told Parliament that Norway had protested to both Paris and London against the mining of her waters at dawn today, a sudden move by which the Allies hoped to cut off Germany's Swedish ore shipments through Norway's western coastal waters.

In a public statement Koht charged the Allies with an "open breach of international law" and demanded that the mines "be removed at once and that the guard by foreign warships cease." Britain was patrolling Norway's waters near the new mine fields, stating such action would be for 48 hours to warn away neutral vessels.

Then came news of the sinking of the German transport.

In all Scandinavia, statesmen, in realization that the dreaded day had arrived bringing the European war to the north, gathered to discuss the cloudy future and await a feared retaliation from Germany.

Leaders of the Norwegian Parliament which was called into special session, said they were behind the government's action in the crisis. A cabinet meeting was held in Oslo which military and naval leaders attended.

Leaders of all of Denmark's political parties met in Copenhagen, and in Stockholm Swedish leaders watched gravely. The Swedish foreign office announced there had been no violation of Swedish water, but officials admittedly were worried.

The mine fields which British ships planted off the Norwegian west coast this morning were heavily guarded tonight by British warships, which could be seen plainly from the shore.

All ships of northern Norway were ordered to remain in port, and since some roads in northern Norway still are snowbound, transportation between the northern and southern parts of the country was made extremely difficult.

The Oslo newspaper Arbejdarbladet, a government organ, said that "the situation is particularly grave for our country, but in such times we must keep our heads cool."

"Any tendency toward nervousness or panic would only make it worse," the paper said. "Norway naturally will protest in a most emphatic way against any closing of her waters and demand respect for international laws. But it is a question under the present strained conditions whether any regard will be taken of our protests.

"How will Germany react? The language in Berlin is very violent. But what step will Germany take and will this hit us and other neutral Scandinavian countries?"

Whether Sweden had an inkling of the British action in mining Germany's route northward through Norwegian waters was regarded as an interesting question in view of last night's Stockholm announcement that certain stiffening defense measures in Sweden had been taken.

Norway had no advance notice of the act.

Warships Hit At Scapa Flow, Reich Claims

British Deny Damage, Say Nazi Raiders Shot Out of Air

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), April 9.—German warplanes dropped incendiary and high explosive bombs in their third raid within a month last night on Britain's Scapa Flow naval base, the air ministry reported early today. At least two German planes were shot down, the British said, and a third was believed brought down before the attack ended.

In Berlin, the official German news agency, DNB, said the raid was successful and that several heavy warships were hit, but the British asserted the attack resulted in no damage.

A civilian was buried under the debris caused by a high explosive bomb, a communique added, but suffered no injury beyond shock.

"Small fires started in the heather by the incendiary bombs which fell on the moorland and the roof of an outlying farmhouse was damaged by the fire of high explosive bombs which fell near," the British statement said. "No other damage to property was caused.

"It is now known that two of the enemy aircraft which took part in the raid were shot down by the Royal Air Force fighter aircraft and it is believed that a third which was severely damaged by machine gun-fire and was last seen diving toward the sea met with the same fate."

The German planes, divided into three waves, also flew over the Orkney Islands surrounding Scapa Flow, but no bombs were reported dropped on the land.

Residents of the area said the Germans flew at "tremendous height."

British fighters, described by the residents as "thick as locusts," went up to intercept the Germans and antiaircraft guns opened fire.

The French high command's afternoon communique said both its own and enemy planes were again "active" in a day's fighting. Six German planes were reported felled yesterday—five on French territory and their crews captured and one which fell in a flaming mass with its crew killed.

All French planes were said to have returned safely.

(The German communique reported seven Allied planes shot down yesterday, five of them on the Western Front, and admitted the loss of three German planes.)

Wild Chase Follows Downtown Store Holdup

up car roared by, and police took up pursuit. Down Benning road the four machines raced, cruiser sirens screeching and police firing at the tires of the fleeing car. At the end of Benning road, where the thoroughfare meets a six-street intersection, the bandit car almost overturned as it swerved sharply and headed down Maryland avenue toward the Capitol.

At the Fourteenth street crossing to Maryland avenue the desperadoes' escape was blocked off by traffic which had halted for a red light. The badits pulled over to the sidewalk, jumped out of the car, and ran in different directions.

Police gave chase on foot, also splitting up their forces. Detective Lubore captured one of the trio, a 27-year-old Washington man, in an alley a block away. The prisoner was later found to be unarmed, with $28 in loose bills in his pocket. A second robber was chased to the roof of a building, from which he escaped his pursuers by dropping 25 feet to an adjacent roof.

Hospitals, Doctors Warned

At least once in the chase, police believed the bandits fired back. They also thought that one of the trio was hit by their shower of bullets. All doctors and hospitals in the District were warned.

Extra police were brought to the Maryland avenue-Fourteenth street area in an attempt to capture the other two men.

The abandoned car, it was learned, had been stolen earlier yesterday. It was owned by Ray Morris, of Arlington, who had parked it on L street northwest, between Fourth and Fifth.

Gas Station Robbed

Shortly before the liquor store holdup, three men, fitting the description of the trio in the chase, robbed a gas station at First and K streets northeast. They took $25 from Emilo Palumbo, 58, of 37 K street northwest, the night manager, and $1.50 from Thomas Veile, 39, of 76 V street northwest, an auditor of the gas station chain.

The Lunts Are Involved in Nonsensical Correspondence by a Meddling Crank; Matters on the Local Theatrical Scene

By Richard L. Coe

EXHIBIT A:

Genesee Depot, Wisconsin.

Dramatic Critic, The Washington Post.

My dear friend: I find that I must ask a favor of you and, if you can do this favor it would help all of us.

When our show "There Shall Be No Night" comes to Washington would it be asking too much to just forget writing a review? Or if you can't do that, just give us a very small notice—an unfavorable one. Of course, I would want you to consult your managing editor about this.

I trust that you will understand my feelings in the matter as we are not at all eager to continue in this play. There are certain obligations which I cannot explain and I am truly sorry that I cannot offer them to you as this play will not do for us.

If you can do this favor it will mean so much and I thought it kinder to give you my honest opinion. I shall be very grateful. Yours sincerely,

EXHIBIT C:

Postal Union to R. L. C., Drama Desk, The Washington Post.

You have received no letter from Miss Fontanne or from me stop Please send me the letter you have stop Thank You stop Alfred Lunt.

So yesterday afternoon when we told Press Representative Bill Fields over long-distance that we knew well that persons of the Lunts' standing would never stoop to such stuff as a means of getting into the papers, he agreed. He was as amazed as the Lunts and Victor Samrock of the Playwrights Co. had been.

This obviously is libelous action on the part of a crank and the first acting team of the American theater have a hazy idea which crank it might be. The Lunts have given up a projected rest to play Robert E. Sherwoods drama of a Finnish idealist. That inveterate drama-goer Ward Morehouse journeyed to Providence for the premiere, wrote glowingly of it for several days. The Drama Critics' Circle has postponed voting on the year's best until the play opens in New York.

So don't believe a word of it and chalk up this amazing, unnecessary correspondence to one of those many cranks whose pleasure it is to annoy the people of the theater.

Roadside Theater, with its opening two months away, announces try-outs for the cowpath season Wednesday and Thursday evenings, April 24 and 25, in room 200 of the George Washington University School of Government, Twenty-first and G streets northwest. Director Ralph Fowler will cast his seven shows from former Roadsiders and those aspirants who tryout week after next. Come prepared to do a scene either from memory or by reading. If two or more players wish to do a scene together, that is quite satisfactory to the Roadside powers that be. Only don't forget the dates.

Daniel Frohman has postponed the Actors' Fund Benefit a week, shifting the date at the National from Sunday, April 28, to Sunday, May 5. More time to contact more names is the worthy reason of the president of the Actors' Fund.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 8.

Theodore Dreiser's personal choice for "Sister Carrie" is Ginger Rogers. After seeing the bare realism of her performance in "Primrose Path," Dreiser said, "She does a great job. She ought to make a swell Carrie." And in case you've forgotten, that heroine "is a sister to all men, that's why I gave her that name." The 68-year-old writer who used to call Hollywood a hick town and refused to work here, now loves the place and goes regularly to the movies, and says, "We're all cogs in the machine of life—even movie actors!" He's in for a disappointment about Ginger Rogers, because Irene Dunne's going to play the part, and I think she'll be wonderful. Incidentally, for those who thought "Primrose Path" wasn't quite so hot, it's fun to know they're breaking records. To me, that's one of the greatest performances Ginger's ever given.

HOPPER

Frank Capra's short picture based on the Academy Awards and their recent banquet got actors to do what no other director in the business could achieve. He couldn't take close-ups at the dinner because they weren't made up, so the biggest stars in the business, including Tracy, Vivien Leigh, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Fay Bainter, all went over to Warners, made up, and reenacted the scenes they had done some nights previous at the Cocoanut Grove.

They'll have 120 stars in the four reels, and it only cost Warners $30,000. Frank cuts back to other award winners and scenes from various pictures that gave them the Oscar. Should be mighty interesting. Also, it's a new stunt to hold a preview at Ciro's.

It looks pretty certain that Hedy Lamarr will go over to RKO and make "Too Many Girls" with George Abbott. I hope she'll be as lucky as she was when Walter Wanger put her in "Algiers." Seems funny that with all the master minds at Metro, other lots know what to do for her when Metro doesn't.

Here's a story that proves ideas are worth money in Hollywood—but they have to be uniquely colossal. Fred Kelly wrote one paragraph—the shortest short story on record—for the Readers' Digest—about a couple born and raised in New York City. They heard friends talking so much about home towns they decided to adopt one for themselves. M-G-M saw the story, paid as much for it as they do for some finished scripts.

Foreign Legion Faces Reality At Trans-Lux

Winston Churchill Also Viewed in Newsreels; Travelogue on Algiers

Undoubtedly tops in the news section of the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week are the scenes showing the French Foreign Legion as it prepares to join the Allied forces for the big war. Destination unknown! Here is romance and reality united.

Splendid are the pictures of the Pennsylvania flood area, as are those of the United States fleet shoving off for secret war tests. Army bombers soar over the Grand Canyon, while Navy officials test the latest torpedo boat. Candidate Jim Farley takes part in the famous mule parade and auction in Tennessee as the San Francisco Fair gets dolled up for the 1940 opening.

In Europe the big news is the appointment of Winston Churchill, already Lord of the Admiralty, as high command over the army and the air service. There are excellent pictures of this remarkable character. In high contrast, we see the icebound crew of a Norwegian freighter being saved from starvation by an autogiro bringing food supplies.

"Unveiling Algeria"

In the sports world the gamut is run from badminton championships in Seattle to the intercollegiate swim meet at New Haven. Also there is a demonstration as New York adopts the pari-mutuel betting system for horse racing while the Kentucky Derby favorites are previewed. The Chicago dog show is included for canine fans.

In the realm of short subjects "Unveiling Algeria" give a splendid eye picture of this, the second largest French port, only a hundred years ago a den of pirates.

"Vacation Diary" is the story of two New York secretaries on a cruise to Bermuda. Grantland Rice presents "The Human Fish," in the person of Newton Perry, probably the greatest undersea swimmer of all time. The shots are taken in Florida, and in addition to being thrilling show some beautiful water scenes.

The cartoon of the week offers "Donald's Penguin."

Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Hollywood, April 8.—So many things have happened during the seven weeks I've been a-gadding that I feel like a stranger in my own home town.

FIDLER

Way back yonder in February, 1940, the boys at M-G-M were predicting a glorious future for a slip of a gal named Lana Turner; now, when I mention her, they just look bewildered. "Oh, yes—you mean Mrs. Artie Shaw. Uh-huh, nice kid . . . But listen! Have you seen Laraine Day?"

In that dim past, Dolores del Rio and Cedric Gibbons were everybody's candidates for the happiest-marriage certificate. Now the certificate they're campaigning for is an entirely different sort of document.

Out Warner Brothers way, Olivia de Havilland was in the dog house; now she's in the golden throne. At Twentieth, Nancy Kelly was begging for a New York vacation, because she wanted to see her Eddie O'Brien; now she's engaged to a boy named Irving Cummings, jr. Joan Fontaine, who was "just another actress," is now a brand-new star; Jackie Cooper's barytone voice has become an in-the-cellar bass; Bob Burns is being publicized as a Lothario and Dorothy Lamour has actually played a role without her sarong.

However, while all else changes, a few things do remain static. Wally Beery still sprawls in the same Brown Derby booth each lunch time; Errol Flynn is still planning an adventurous trip, and Orson Welles still contemplates making a picture. think I'll call the boys and see if they'll join me in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

IDOL CHATTER: Don't know how good Bette Davis is at higher mathematics, but she's getting to be a whiz at handling simple studio frictions. In-a-word description of Johnny Weissmuller: Swimportant. As Jane Withers grows older, that resemblance to her mother, always noticable, becomes positively striking. Lynn Overman says he's afraid success has gone to Andy Devine's hips. One nice thing about our matinee idols' ski ventures: they get to meet a lot of pretty nurses. Honest, now, have you ever seen more beauteous hair than Arleen Whelan's crowning glory? Wally (waddling) Beery, decked out in white tie and tails, always reminds me of a penguin. Prerequisite equipment for any gal who wants to fill a star's shoes is a shapely pair of legs. Eddie Albert's idea of a good time: a perfectly iddy-yacht-ic life.

CUFF NOTES: Warner Baxter has shelved that Palm Springs froggery—neighbors complained they couldn't sleep, and neither could he . . . Are those Saturday afternoon air jaunts of Jimmy Stewart and Olivia de Havilland dress rehearsals for an elopement, as intimates insist? . . . Add romantic twosomes: Kay Griffith and Frank Swann .

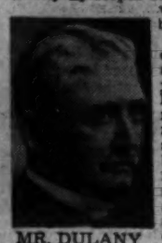
H. R. Dulany's Burial Today In Upperville

D. C. Banker, 82, Suffers Stroke; Was Noted Horseman

The funeral for H. Rozier Dulany, sr., 82, Washington businessman, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today at Trinity Episcopal Church in Upperville, Va., his boyhood home.



MR. DULANY

Mr. Dulany died shortly after 5:30 a. m. yesterday at his home, 1838 Wyoming avenue northwest, after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage. He was stricken Friday and remained in a coma until his death.

Born at Oakley, the family farm in Upperville, Va., in 1857, he attended elementary schools in the District, was graduated from the University of Virginia and did two years of post-graduate work at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

He Taught School

Upon completion of his studies at Johns Hopkins, Mr. Dulany taught school for two years and then returned to Washington, where he became connected with the Riggs National Bank. At the time of his death, he was known primarily in the District as the chairman of the board of finance at the bank, but he also conducted a real estate investment business, with offices in the Bowen Building, 815 Fifteenth street northwest.

In 1888, he married Anne Willing Carter, daughter of an officer under Gen. Robert E. Lee, Col. Thomas Hill Carter.

The ceremony took place at the Governor's Mansion in Richmond, and a golden wedding anniversary was celebrated by the couple in 1938.

Was Noted Horseman

Formerly a noted horseman, Mr. Dulany bred and raised horses at his Upperville farm and had entered his horses in many races. He came of a long line of horsemen. His uncle, the late Richard H. Dulany, was credited with organizing the first horse show in America, which was held in Upperville.

A former director of the Chevy Chase Club, Mr. Dulany was also a member of the Metropolitan Club here. Surviving are his wife, his sister, Mrs. J. H. Beverly, of this city; a son, H. Rozier Dulany, jr., lawyer and president of Griffith Consumers Co., and his three grandchildren, Ben, Julia and Anne Dulany. Interment will be in the family burying ground at the Upperville farm.

Mrs. Smith To Seek Place Of Husband

Mrs. Clyde H. Smith, wife of Representative Smith, of Maine, who died here early yesterday, announced that, in accordance with her husband's last wish, she will file her candidacy as successor for his position in Congress.

MR. SMITH

Funeral services for the Representative will be held at 3028 Newark street northwest at 1 p. m. today. Interment will be in the family plot in Hartland, Me., Wednesday.

The 63-year-old Republican, who won a seat in the Maine Legislature at 21, died of heart disease.

Sunday, when told of his condition by his doctor, he issued this statement: "My physician informs me that I am a seriously ill man. All that I can ask of my friends and supporters is that in the coming primary and general election, if I am unable to enter the campaign, they support the candidate of my choice, my wife and partner in public life."

The youngest person elected to the State Legislature, Smith became the Congressional Representative of the Second District in 1936. He was the twenty-fourth member of the Seventy-sixth Congress to die in office.

The House adjourned yesterday in tribute to Smith. Representative Oliver (Republican), of Maine, described Smith as having been "a valiant fighter" and "a pioneer in the principles of old-age pensions."

Named by Majority Leader Rayburn to attend the funeral services were Representatives Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey; Welch (Republican), of California, and Brewster and Oliver, of Maine. The House has "lost one of its most valuable members" was the comment of Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Smith, the former Margaret Chase, of Skowhegan, was married to the Representative May 4, 1930. She is president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Maine.

One of the Representative's last acts was to rescue the National Labor Relations Board from a threat of abolition. The House Labor Committee was considering abolishment of the board when Smith cast his vote and that of Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, against abolition and provided the 9-to-8 vote which prevented the committee from recommending that the board be eliminated.

Besides his wife, the Representative leaves two brothers, Myron E. Smith, of Skowhegan, and Dr. Kleber W. Smith, of Freeport, Me.

Capt. Bryant Funeral Rites Planned Today

Colorful Riverman Supplied D. C. Oyster Markets for 50 Years

The funeral of Capt. Jack Bryant, 75, colorful riverman who for more than a half century sailed the Potomac to supply Capital oyster markets, will be at 9 a. m. today at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and E streets southwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Capt. Bryant died Friday in George Washington University Hospital.

His career on the Potomac began when he came here at the age of 12 to man the oars on rowboats bringing oysters here from Chesapeake Bay.

Prepower Boat Era

In later years he recalled his experiences before the advent of power boats:

"There was a time when our boats were the only ones there were to bring oysters to Washington. I remember when I took a pair of 18-foot oars and rowed all night to get to the markets first. The first ones got the best prices."

For most of his 50-year career, however, Capt. Bryant plied the Potomac by sail. He skippered two sloops for more than 40 years but was best known as the captain of his favorite "bugeye," the Edith Marcy, which he acquired in 1929.

Unable to swim despite his long experience on the water, Capt. Bryant narrowly escaped death on two plunges into the Potomac. Once he pulled his 300-pound bulk to safety over the boat's gunwale; another time two colored crewmen saved him.

Retired in 1935

Ten years ago Capt. Bryant reluctantly installed a motor in the Edith Marcy to compete with motor-driven boats monopolizing the oyster business. At that time his health began to fail and in 1935 he retired.

With business declining, and eager to keep his boat in use Capt. Bryant put the Edith Marcy at the service of Washington Sea Scouts for use on summer cruises.

"A boat is like a house," he explained to friends. "You can't leave it closed up and expect to keep it in condition."

Surviving Capt. Bryant, of 635 G street southwest, are five daughters, Mrs. Grace J. Ellis, Mrs. Lillian Pickerall, Mrs. Gladys Hutchinson, Mrs. Pearl Lane and Mrs. Madeleine Simpson, all of Washington, and two sons, John R. Bryant, of Washington, and William Bryant, also an oystermans, of St. Marys County, Md.

Waring E. Evans, Printing Official, Dies in Rockville

Waring E. Evans, 82, for more than 50 years secretary-treasurer of Judd & Detweiler, Inc., printers, and former Interior Department official, died yesterday at his home in Rockville, Md.

He was treasurer of Calvary Baptist Church for many years and was one of the original members of the Sunday school of that church. He was a member of La Fayette Lodge, No. 19, F. A. A. M., the Scottish Rite and Almas Temple Shrine.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Kate Judd Evans; two sons, Edwin G. Evans and Clarence Judd Evans, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. Thursday at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Dr. Aydelotte Stresses Stake Of U. S. in War

Policy of Isolation Will Not Work, Says Swarthmore President

This country's "policy of isolation and neutrality is bankrupt and will never get us anywhere," Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College, said yesterday at a meeting of the Washington Branch of the English Speaking Union.

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, also spoke at the luncheon gathering of 500 at the Willard Hotel.

Stating that America "has much at stake" in the present European war, Dr. Aydelotte said that "Neutrality in thought is the equivalent of absence of thought." He cited ties binding this country to European democracies.

"The question (of the European war) is not discussed frankly enough at the present time," he said. "People who force discussion of the question are not warmongers, but serve better the interest of the United States and are better Americans for so doing."

Dr. Aydelotte discussed the problem of Rhodes scholars who have been unable to continue their studies at Oxford. He said that most are now making "remarkable records" at American universities.

Lord Lothian hailed the English language as "by far the most potent language of freedom" in politics, law and literature. He said that the language traditions of freedom of the United States and Great Britain have spread throughout the world.

Mrs. Agnes Phelps Dies at 91; Lived Here for 50 Years

Norway's Plight

The plight of the Scandinavian neutrals has been unhappy from the very beginning of the present European conflict. It now bids fair to become desperate.

The situation of Norway offers a case in point. Like her neighbors, Sweden and Denmark, Norway has never varied in her determination to remain neutral. Also like them, she has increasingly suffered from war's depredations. This has been particularly true with regard to the crucial struggle at sea.

Again and again Norwegian ships have been torpedoed by German U-boats or destroyed by German mines for, in her effort to isolate and starve out Great Britain, the Third Reich has made no distinctions whatever between Allied and neutral shipping. And there has been practically nothing which Norway could do about it but suffer in silence. To take reprisals against Germany might bring about the very calamity which the Oslo government has been trying desperately to avert—Norwegian involvement in the war.

Only last Saturday, for instance, the Norse collier, Navarra, was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine, ten members of the crew and two passengers being drowned.

Under the circumstances the violent German outcry against Britain's unquestioned violation of international law in the mining of Norwegian waters is a mockery. Of course, it would suit the Third Reich's interests to have the British observe the rules it has shown every readiness to flout.

Quite justifiable, however, is the protest of the Norwegian government which not only faces the possibility of continued violation of her neutrality by the Allies but, also a likely increase in the pressure on her from Germany.

In this war, even more than in the last, neutral rights which cannot be maintained by force have lost their meaning. The Scandinavian kingdoms are much too weak to protect their rights against such powerful belligerents. They find themselves helplessly between two fires which daily grow hotter as the war enters an active stage, particularly with respect to the Allied blockade operations.

It is both tragic and ironic that, in this intensified economic war being waged by the Allies, the first victims are Europe's northern neutrals.

Misuse Of Census Data

Senator Tobey's charge that a plan was recently devised to open census returns to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the Army and Navy intelligence services has been confirmed by Attorney General Jackson. The proposal did not, however, originate in the Department of Justice, as erroneously stated. And Mr. Jackson says that it has been personally considered and rejected by the President.

It is to be hoped that the matter will end there. For if the Government were to make available to detective services returns given under a pledge of secrecy, a large section of the public would undoubtedly refuse to cooperate with the census enumerators.

Probably very little useful information concerning the activities of criminals or spies could be garnered from census files. Such individuals are not likely to become communicative when enumerators call on them, and the truthfulness of their statements is open to doubt in any case. But even if the census returns may be assumed to contain needed information about suspects, the gains for law enforcement from use of this data would be outweighed by the damage done.

Great stress has been laid upon the secrecy of the returns. Assurances have been given that the data would be used for general statistical purposes only and that no information would be available concerning individuals. To throw these records open to Government agencies wishing to scan individual returns and use them for ulterior purposes would be a breach of faith which the people would deeply resent. Even the most law-abiding citizen would begin to wonder whether a Government that broke its promises so carelessly could be relied upon to make no illegitimate use of information about their personal affairs.

The comprehensiveness and accuracy of the census depend primarily upon the extent to which the public is willing to cooperate with the Government by making full and truthful replies. That cooperation will be forthcoming only if secrecy is scrupulously observed.

Third Term As A Symbol

It is not by accident that the question of a third term has become a more formidable issue today than ever before in American history. That fact is closely related to the policies which the Administration has followed during the last seven years and to the bureaucratic system which has grown up in Washington since the World War.

No previous Chief Executive has wielded sufficient power to break down the two-term tradition. It remains to be seen whether President Roosevelt will eliminate himself from the 1940 race, or whether he can win if he compels the Democratic Party to nominate him once more. But one fact stands out clearly. The third-term movement this year has impetus that it has never before attained For that particular reason the American people should understand the movement in its broadest implications.

The most ardent third-termers are to be found among that vast number of Government officials and employes whose jobs will be in danger if a new Administration comes into power. The movement cannot be explained merely in terms of personal ambition on the part of Mr. Roosevelt. Rather it reflects the wishes, not only of a vast bureaucracy, but also of an army of citizens who are drawing benefits from the Federal Treasury. Subsidized farmers, WPA workers, NYA beneficiaries and many other groups receiving direct aid from the Government may be said to have a vested interest in continuation of the New Deal under Mr. Roosevelt's leadership.

If the Government continues to extend its control over our national life, the strength of this bureaucracy and these subsidized groups will continue to grow. Every citizen will find his economic interests tied up with those of some organized group dependent upon legislative favors. In other words, it is not a dictatorship of the proletariat that Americans need to fear so much as the indefinite perpetuation of a regime commanding the support of a huge bureaucracy and subsidized pressure groups.

Regarded from this viewpoint, the pressure for a third term for President Roosevelt is less important as an immediate danger than a warning of what the Nation must guard against in the future. If present trends toward centralization of power should continue, and the principle of indefinite tenure for the President should be accepted, the tendency toward self-continuation of any regime might become irresistible.

Our problem is not only how to assure a succession of fresh leadership but also how to maintain some degree of personal freedom in a country that is moving in the direction of centralized governmental controls. That problem is more complicated than it was a few decades ago, but if it is intelligently understood there is no reason to believe that it will prove insoluble. One of the first symptoms of such understanding would be a rational comprehension of the warning contained in the third-term movement.

Wages And Productivity

The Brookings Institution has just published a study by Dr. Spurgeon Bell which undertakes to show the relation between expanding productive efficiency and the income of wage-earners. The investigation was chiefly concerned with trends of investment, productive output, employment, and the distribution of income during the past 20 years. But the public will be much more interested in the interpretation of the statistical results, especially their bearing upon the causes and cure of unemployment.

One fact that stands out conspicuously is the pronounced increase in productivity per man-hour since the early twenties in major industrial groups. Those increases averaged 50 per cent for manufacturing industries, 89 per cent for mining and 111 per cent for electric light and power.

However, the advance in physical volume of output lagged far behind the expansion in productivity except in case of the electric light and power industries with an increase of 141 per cent. In the case of manufactures output increased only half as much as productivity and in mining the expansion was negligible.

As result, hours of employment show a sharp decline in all but the electric light and power industries. Due to shorter working hours, the actual number of persons employed in manufacturing industries was slightly higher in 1936-37 than in 1923-24, but in mining and in railroads the declines in numbers employed amounted to 14 and 39 per cent, respectively.

During this 15-year period, according to Dr. Bell's estimates, hourly earnings in terms of money increased and hourly real wages (which allow for reduced living costs) experienced a marked advance. Due to shorter hours and slack employment, weekly money earnings declined, although real earnings increased somewhat.

Gains from increased productivity accrued chiefly to consumers in the form of price reductions and improved quality of products. The return on capital investment declined, and workers' gains largely take the form of more leisure, and lower prices for goods bought.

Dr. Bell concludes that the "explanation of the decline both in aggregate wages and in aggregate earnings on capital is to be found in the failure of output to increase in line with the increase in productivity." This is rather a statement of fact than an explanation, since it leaves unanswered the question as to why productive output has lagged and employment has been restricted. In Dr. Bell's opinion, however, price reductions provide a positive inducement to consumers to buy more, hence act as a stimulus to increased output, more jobs, and fuller employment of capital.

Party Of Protest

At their national convention here in Washington on Sunday, the Socialists nominated as their candidate for President of the United States a man who has not the remotest chance of winning. But Norman Thomas, the individual thus honored, has no illusions on that score.

An attractive personality and his party's leading orator, Mr. Thomas has been the Socialist standard bearer in every Presidential campaign since 1928. He made his best showing in 1932 when he polled 884,781 votes. This was well below the total of close to a million reached by the late Eugene V. Debs in 1920. Yet, at the same time, it proved, very much better than what the Socialists managed to do in the Roosevelt landslide year of 1936 when the Thomas vote was only 187,720 or less than that polled by the now vanished and forgotten Union Party of Congressman Lemke.

The prospects facing the Socialists this year are not much better than they were four years ago, if as good. The party today is but a remnant with its former right and left wings lopped off. Harassed by the Communists, who have stolen their song, their slogans and most recently, their foreign policy, the Socialists have since 1932 lost even more of their former strength to the New Deal.

More now than ever the Socialist Party is purely and simply a party of protest. As such it continues to have an important role to play as critic of our economic system and gadfly of the major parties.

The boast of Norman Thomas that 15 of the 17 demands for social legislation embodied in the Socialist platform of 1912, "have been adopted in some form by the Republicans and the Democrats" is also an explanation of one reason why the Socialist Party has made so little headway in American life.

Americans, by and large, are far too practical to be doctrinaire. But, by the same token, legitimate criticism of abuses soon or late leads to remedial action.

A Lamentable Choice

Efforts on the part of the House District Committee to revive the Nichols bill arouse very little hope that the District's tax muddle will be straightened out at the present session of Congress. The House has already emphatically refused to consider this bill. The chance that its attitude will be different when the measure is called up two weeks hence seems to be very slight.

This revival of the Nichols bill may not mean that all effort to amend the present income tax law has been abandoned. If the House once more refuses to consider Mr. Nichols' combination sales and income taxes, it will still be possible for the District Committee to bring forward the proposed amendments to the present law. But this second attempt to secure acceptance of a measure that is obviously distasteful to the House will certainly not enhance the prospect for straightening out this tangled situation at the present session of Congress.

There is every reason to believe that the amendment sponsored by local authorities would modify the emasculated income tax into a satisfactory revenue law. By applying the tax to all income earned in the District without regard for the legal residence of the taxpayer, the difficulties raised by the Court of Appeals' decision in the Sweeney case could be overcome. And few new hardships would be imposed, for taxes thus paid could be deducted from the sums which suburban residents working in Washington must now pay to Maryland and Virginia.

Since this solution is in any event preferable to the Nichols bill, the committee has made a lamentable mistake in not recommending it to the House.

We Can't View With Alarm

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Lately we have been hearing a good many complaints about the younger generation. Little girls, we are told, are putting up their hair and demanding evening gowns instead of party frocks (old style) before they are out of the grades. And boys are clamoring for dinner jackets at an age when their fathers were just beginning to be interested in long trousers.

It's a cynical and hard-headed generation that is growing up on a diet of blood-curdling radio programs instead of the not altogether anemic stories of the Brothers Grimm, we hear. To clinch this argument, the school superintendent of Manchester, N. H., reports that pupils no longer bring an apple to their teacher, but give her cigarettes, instead.

To us that seems rather encouraging. These youngsters are growing up on a globe that is bouncing from crisis to crisis, and a little realism may stand them in good stead. Certainly the teacher is more likely to be appeased by cigarettes than by an apple.

Reply To Canadian

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not necessary, perhaps, to point out the disgust with which Americans have read the recent remark of the Ontario Attorney General, Mr. Conant, that, "If Canada can bring about active participation of the United States at the present time, she may go down in history as the savior of democracy . . ."

The savior of democracy, to be sure! Let us rejoice in knowing that some few Canadians have now the same sweet sentiments that Woodrow Wilson had in 1916, when he so gallantly was to be "the savior" who would "make the world safe for democracy," but who instead cut off the nose of Uncle Sam by sticking it too far into the thrashing wheels of world power politics.

It is gratifying, however, to know that Mr. Conant's spoken opinions are not the opinions of all Canadians. We can applaud the dominion government officials who, the day following the Attorney General's statement, described his words as "ill-advised and unfortunate." Thus I suppose we cannot too harshly criticize the random remarks of such men as Mr. Conant. But, none too often can we remind ourselves that the Canadians entered the war only because of their filial bonds with the mother country.

America must remain neutral because she is not tied by any bonds with a single foreign power anywhere. We owe a debt of love and honor to the brave American boys whose bones lie mouldering in Flanders and Arlington; brave American boys who, but for our foolish act of 1917, might today be thriving citizens, good husbands, and fond parents.

The Right To Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad to see that we have some Congressmen who have the courage of their convictions to give the people of this city a chance to exercise their right to vote. This should be successful, and eventually will be successful. This great work is bound to win.

We should all be interested in backing the movement that has been sponsored by Mr. Edward Arnold, of Hollywood, entitled "I Am an American." In simple words it lets the youth of America know their responsibility and exercise their right as American citizens and the right to vote which has been denied the people of our Nation's Capital.

ARTHUR CLARENDON SMITH,

Correction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that in your report of the contribution to the Blood Bank Fund made by James E. Walker Post, No. 26, and its auxiliary, you stated, "James E. Walker Post, No. 26, headed by Dr. William F. Nelson." This is an error. I am not the commander of the James E. Walker Post, No 26, but chairman of the child welfare committee which had charge of the card party to raise funds for the blood bank.

I am sure that I can speak for the James E. Walker Post and its auxiliary in saying that we were delighted to work with you and the radio station WJSV, cosponsors of this very worthy movement. The Children's Hospital is doing a great work in this city and should have the hearty support of all the citizens in the District.

Retirement Act

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago you had an editorial entitled "War And Age" inspired by the news that five British admirals, previously retired because of old age, had been reinstated on the active list for life. The last paragraph of the article read as follows: "There is no essential reason why this same rule could not be applied in time of peace. No nation is so rich that it can be prodigal of its human reserves."

The United States Government, instead of leading other employers in using the services of civil servive employes able to continue a little beyond retirement age when still competent and desirous of continuing, pursues a diametrically opposite policy to the above. Prior to 1932, limited extensions were made under section 2, "Autocratic Segregation," Civil Service Retirement Act, but on June 30, 1932, section 2 was canceled by the passage of the so-called "Economy Act," under section 204, which reads as follows:

"Compulsory Retirement for Age—Section 204—On and after July 1, 1932, no person rendering civilian service in any branch of the United States Government or the municipal government of the District of Columbia who shall have reached the retirement age prescribed for automatic separation from the service notwithstanding any provision of law or regulation to the contrary."

"Provided: that the President may by executive order exempt from the provisions of this section any person when in his judgment the public interest so requires, etc."

The crux of the method of enforcing this system of "Compulsory Retirement" lies in the "provision" above stated in section 204.

The President of necessity confines his approval of extension orders to cases either recommended or approved by the head of the office concerned.

Since the bureaus have adopted a policy of making no recommendations, requests, or approvals of extensions, to the President, no employe gets a chance to work after reaching retirement age. Even if the plan for three one-year extensions without the President's approval being necessary outlawed in section 281, pending, were passed and became law it is doubtful whether the bureaus would pay any attention to it.

The Anti-Lynching Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Mark Sullivan's reasoning about the antilynching bill (which seems to coincide with your own) is so remarkable that it amounts to a phenomenon. It is alleged that only three lynchings occurred last year in the United States, therefore we need no law against lynching. Since there were but three last year we know that there will be none hereafter.

Follow this curious ratiocination and see where it leads. Some States in the Union have passed a year without a recorded case of homicide. Therefore, abolish the law against murder. Mayhem is a crime of rare occurrence. Repeal the law against it.

But Mr. Sullivan and you do not mention the real reason for the opposition to a law against the crime that has brought profound disgrace and dishonor to this country in the eyes of all civilization. You do not mention the fact that lynching is regarded as a valuable adjunct to the system that keeps in subjection, economic and political, one-tenth of the population of this Republic.

Yet that is the real and only real mainspring of the opposition to this great and sorely needed reform.

WILLIS J. RUTLEDGE.
Washington, March 29.

We Have Already Done So

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Pointing the Moral," in The Post of April 2, followed a current pattern of thought or lack of thought, against which your paper ought to be able to guard itself.

Note your chain of reasoning:

1. There are still over 10,500,000 persons unemployed.

2. WPA rolls will be cut by 700,000 persons in the next three months.

3. Dismissed WPA workers do not readily find private employment, and WPA at best does not provide jobs for all needy employable persons.

Now note your conclusion:

1. The system is expensive and wasteful.

2. Federal work relief should be abandoned in favor of local relief systems. "Under a system of grants-in-aid, moreover, these local officials would have a direct incentive to avoid wasteful expenditures."

There is no quarrel with the first three points, although it is quite understandable why WPA workers dismissed en masse do not readily find employment. There are now 2,300,000 persons employed on WPA. Those who are dismissed do not find private employment for much the same reasons that the other 8,200,000 unemployed do not find jobs.

However, it is not clear how your conclusions were reached. Practically nothing in your chain of reasoning points out why Federal relief is wasteful and nothing is said to explain why local relief is more efficient. Your attack was unfair because it did not state clearly how the cost of locally administered relief can be reduced. Perhaps you would be able to state editorially which of the following methods you would expect local authorities to utilize in order to make relief less wasteful.

1. Cut costs by eliminating or curtailing work in favor of outright relief for needy unemployed, thereby substituting a budgetary allowance in lieu of a security wage above the subsistence level.

2. Cut costs by reducing WPA wages. (The average WPA worker who supports a family of four persons, including himself, earns approximately $54 a month.)

3. Cut costs by eliminating Federal expenditures for materials, thus restricting work to boondoggling, which is uneconomical to the community and demoralizing to the worker.

4. Cut administrative costs, even though the current Relief Act permits only about 3.4 per cent of appropriated funds to be used for administrative purposes.

5. Cut Federal costs by increasing local contributions beyond the 25 per cent now required by law.

There is no magic in Federal work relief, and none in local relief. If the costs are to be cut, the reductions must be made somewhere. Where does The Post propose they shall be made.

It cannot be said that the question of Federal work relief is not a public issue, but the most responsible members of the community ought to discuss the question on its merits, rather than by some fallacious chain of reasoning. If you will editorialize on the reasons or evidence by which you reached your conclusions stated in your editorial of April 2, or if you will explain which of the methods, listed or unlisted, you would utilize to reduce relief costs, you would be pointing a far better moral than you did in your recent editorial.

The Post Impressionist

The Sound—The Fury

As a radio scriptician—that's another name for a scrivener of screeds which clutter ethereal wavebands—I have always marveled at the vagaries of sound effects.

But sound effects can be overdone, I'm told. This fact is constantly reiterated by indignant members of "the great unseen audience." They not only stress this fact—they threaten drastic action unless extraneous sound is reduced to a bare minimum. They are grim and unequivocal about it.

Well, don't blame the scriptwriter. His intentions are good and his motives strictly honorable. In other words, he means well. It isn't his fault when sound effects misbehave.

If you were to look over his shoulder as he sat pounding the typewriter keys, transforming blank paper into a radio script, you might read something like this:

(MUSIC—UP AND OUT.)
TERWILLIGER: Ah, Chauncey, my boy!
CHAUNCEY: (IN FAST) I'll thank you, Terwilliger, to call me Mr. Montmorency!
TERWILLIGER: Oh, have it your own way!
CHAUNCEY: Furthermore, I'm leaving now!
TERWILLIGER: I say; Confound it all——
CHAUNCEY: (IN FAST) That is final!
(SOUND—FOOTSTEPS GO OFF MIKE—DOOR OPEN—SHUT.)

On paper this appears logical dialogue and sound. But this is what you hear at the end of the above scene:

"I say! Confound it all——
"That is final!"
CLUMP CLUMP CLUMP—SQUEEZE! BANG!

I once wrote a script about a Jewish rabbi who came to Washington from Galveston, Tex., to intercede with President Taft for an alien Russian slated for deportation. The good rabbi was addicted to pedaling about his home terrain on a bicycle; hence, he saw nothing amiss in stowing his trusty bike aboard the baggage car to use during his sojourn in the Capital.

Arriving here, he mounted his wheel and rode straight up the Avenue to the White House driveway.

Here are the "scenes"—and the actualities—as they shifted from the gates of the White House grounds to the inner sanctum of President Taft:

The driveway was graveled. The White House floors were of hardwood. In the main hall there was a stately grandfather's clock. On the President's desk, a number of letters and papers, and another clock with Westminster chimes.

That's really all you need to know about the "scenery" of the script. Now let's listen to what came out of the living-room radio:

GRRRRRRRUNCH! GRRRRRUNCH! BLONK!
"Ah! At last I am at the White House! Now to see the President!"
CRUNCH! CRUNCH! CLUMP! CLUMP! CLUMP!
KNOCK-KNOCK-KNOCK!
After a short silence—
CLICK! SQUEEEEE!
"Yes, sir?"
"I wish to see the President."
"Have you an appointment sir?"
"No, but——"
"Then I'm afraid it will be impossible——"
"But I must see him! It is a matter of life and death! I came from the Department of Labor—Secretary Nagel—it is imperative——"
"Secretary Nagel? Mmmm! Sir, if you will step in and be seated——"
CLUMP! CLUMP! SQUEEEEE! BANG! CLUMP CLUMP!
"Just a moment, sir. I'll see one of the President's secretaries."
CLUMP! CLUMP! CLUMP!
TICK-TOCK! TICK-TOCK! TICK-TOCK!.
Three seconds' silence here.
"So this is Doctor Henry Cohen, of Galveston, Tex.? I've heard of you, Doctor."
"Thank you, Mr. President!"
"Be seated, please. Mr. Mischler, I'll be ready for that Iowa delegation in a few minutes. And now, Doctor?"
"Mr. President, in Galveston there is a Russian named Demchuk who is being held for deportation. To be sent back means death—the firing squad! For two years he has worked and saved to bring his family to America——"
DING-DONG-DING-DONG!
(That would be the Westminster chimes, if you haven't already guessed. But—keep right on listening!)
"And now—must all this toil and effort go for naught? Mr. President, can you not do something—save these people from misery—suffering—worse?"
"I'm afraid I can do nothing, Doctor. The man is not a citizen——"
"Not yet, sir. But——"
"It grieves me, Doctor Cohen, to refuse your plea. At the same time, I have unbounded admiration for your effort in behalf of a member of your own race."
"My own race? What do you mean, Mr. President? This man is not a Jew! He's a Greek Catholic!"
"Great Caesar's ghost! You came all the way from Texas to intercede for—one moment, Doctor!"
BZZZZZ! BZZZZZZ! CLICK-CLICK-CLICK!

Back Scratching

THE RECENT flurry of publicity regarding J. Edgar Hoover's sojourn in the Miamis was due in part to his participation in the game of log-rolling, also known as back-scratching, which is one of the favorite sports of members of the New Deal Administration. In this game, a department or bureau head enters an understanding with one or more journalists whereby he receives favorable publicity in return for petty news breaks and gossip or background on official matters. The ethical impropriety of such dealing is obvious to real newspaper reporters, but nowadays we have a hybrid type performing on the air as well as in print whose studio rating and pay are measured by their ability to deliver little blurbs of exclusive news or prediction, not necessarily accurate or even true, and not necessarily important. Many items which are sent over the air in a shriek as flash matter are so trivial that in the newspapers, they would not make print at all. The air is scandalously indifferent to the fundamental rules of reporting, which call for verification or, at least, a conscientious effort to verify. But I am sorry I brought up that thought, because the truth is that such hybrids use the same methods in print that they use on the radio, and the press is to that extent no better than the broadcasting companies.

A long time ago, when the public almost unanimously hated prohibition and inferentially, at least, admired bootleggers and racketeers, the hoodlum received a fine press and the gangster fiction and movies and even the gangsters news glamorized the criminal and low-rated the police and Federal agents. But when the kidnapings began, after repeal, there was an abrupt, deliberate change, and J. Edgar Hoover and his department, up to that time almost unknown to the public, were herolized and the criminals correctly were depicted as vermin.

HOOVER'S PRESS apparently went to his head, and a quiet, efficient boss-cop became a celebrity and fight-night type. Cheap publicity began to appear about him. Publicity of the romantic kind which any man can put a stop to if he is determined to do so.

About the same time that Mr. Hoover began to be identified with a type of off journalism, which is the foulest development in the trade since the dirtiest days of James Gordon Bennett, he also began to reproach the bulk of the American press for meddling in the investigations of important crimes. There were regrettable offenses in which reporters using old-fashioned methods accidentally tipped off criminals, but in no case was there any suggestion that any reporter, however uncouth his methods, was in league with the crooks. And it may be remembered that according to Mr. Hoover, himself, and Homer T. Cummings, when he was Attorney General, the local cops are not always trustworthy. In St. Paul and Kansas City, for example, and in Chicago, too, a good reporter, working on his own, might turn up evidence which the police were trying to conceal. And remembering that Harry Daugherty once was Attorney General and William J. Burns, chief of the FBI, it is not unthinkable that the Department of Justice itself might at times be not entirely reliable.

IT SEEMS odd that Mr. Hoover, who was criticizing the press generally for bad ethics, should nevertheless associate his prestige and the reputation of his bureau with a type of journalism which has been a source of shame and embarrassment to all legitimate members of the craft. Legitimate newspapermen learn in the game certain imperative rules, and it was impossible to maintain the highest respect for the head of a Federal bureau who plainly had a preference for the scandal and rumor school of journalism.

A man may choose his friends, and that privilege goes for J. Edgar Hoover, but the reason now given on positive authority why Mr. Hoover permitted his own official prestige and that of his bureau to be so exploited will not endear him to Congress or allay the curiosity of Congress regarding his operations. It is explained that Mr. Hoover permitted this exploitation and touting as an act of gratitude for services rendered. What were those services? Mr. Hoover is naive enough to believe that a log-rolling or propaganda campaign waged on his behalf by a gent's-room journalist compelled Congress to raise the appropriation for his bureau some years ago.

Congress will not like to be told that a bureau chief resorted to such means to influence legislation and that, in payment for this coercion he had permitted the commercial exploitation of the FBI.

Business Opportunity

WANTED. Horses of all kinds and shapes for racing, but not necessarily race horses; age of no importance; condition no issue as long as animals can move legs freely and remain on feet 15 minutes a day. Willing to waive usual standards on height and size, but would rather not consider Shetland ponies or beer-truck horses. Must have sufficient teeth to make forced feeding unnecessary and must not be blind in more than one eye. Animals will be required for racing purposes because of fact there are more tracks opening in America than there are thoroughbred horses; they should be capable of moderate friskiness on way to post and be accustomed to move in a forward direction without use of buggy whip. Bays, browns, chestnuts and blacks preferred, but might consider few whites, piebalds and stripers. Apply American Race Track Supply Corporation, Elmer Twitchell, president.

Mr. Twitchell was interviewed regarding the above advertisement today. "I am taking all the horses I can get, provided they can still stand upright," declared Elmer. "With pari-mutuel tracks being legalized all over the country, and new tracks springing up on all sides, it has dawned on everybody that the one question overlooked is, 'Where will we get the horses to fill the races?'

"I saw an opportunity to incorporate and supply this need. I am in the market for any and all kinds of skinners, and I have stripped every milk wagon and hack in the vicinity."

"Are there no standards that must be observed?" he asked.

"Horses shouldn't be over 13 years of age and gone in both the front and hind legs," replied Elmer. And while I do not bar all cripples, I prefer only the milder cases of rheumatism, spavin, ringbone and springsalt."

"Do horses race at the age of '13?'

"I can name you several racing right now as old as that, and there are any number of 10-year-old plugs in daily competition. El Puma, Brass Monkey and Copper Tube, for instance. When New York and New Jersey both spring into full bloom as pari-mutuel centers you will find that horses like El Puma will be practically juveniles."

"But mustn't all horses be in good condition to race?"

"I see you have never been around much," said Elmer. "All that will be required is that they run once a day without falling."

"But how about speed?"

"You will be able to time these skates with old-fashioned Waterbury watches," snapped Mr. Mr. Twitchell, "and the minute hand missing."

"But the American racing public, will they stand for this low-grade competition?"

"The fans will love it. They don't know a thoroughbred from Hogan's goat. They think Ormondale was the name of an Egyptian king and that Sir Barton is a Scotch whisky. All they want to do is put up two dollars and get five to one or better. They wouldn't care if they were watching camels?"

Illinois Primaries

By J. L. McConaughy, Jr.
Special Correspondent to The Post.

Roosevelt The Sole Issue

Chicago.

NO MATTER how you look at it, there is but one significant name on the Illinois primary ballots: Roosevelt. When 3,500,000 Illinoisans go to the polls today, Roosevelt is the name they will be voting for or against.

Tom Dewey alone filed in the Republican primary. There is no contest there and—since the primary is not binding and is merely an expression of sentiment to guide delegates at national conventions—the chief hope of Republicans is that Dewey will pile up an impressive total. In other words, a vote for Dewey is not so much that as it is a vote against Roosevelt.

The President has but one rival on the Democratic ballot, John Garner. Garner's campaign in the State has been most mild. His managers frankly state they have no hope of beating Roosevelt; their prayer is that Dewey plus Garner's votes will outnumber Roosevelt's. Such a result would demonstrate that the President could not carry Illinois for a third term. And more and more Illinois looks like a key State for November.

Roosevelt's name has the magic touch in politics here. Already it has produced a political marriage among Illinois Democrats that makes veterans of 1936 and 1938 wide-eyed. In those years the Kelly-Nash machine, omnipotent in Chicago, took on Gov. Horner's organization, powerful down-State and in control of the State administration, in primary battles. In 1936 Horner beat Kelly-Nash, although John Stelle, the machine's candidate for lieutenant governor, also got on the ticket. (This combination, incidentally, of Horner and Kelly-Nash-Stelle was as politically weird as Roosevelt and Knox running on the same ticket.) In 1938 the Kelly-Nash forces took another licking when Horner's senatorial candidate, Scott Lucas, unexpectedly won the primary battle from Mike Igoe.

NOW the magic name of Roosevelt has the two antipathetic machines holding hands—the same hands that slung dirty fistfuls of mud at each other two and four years ago.

For both Horner and Chicago's Mayor Ed Kelly are Roosevelt men to the core. Kelly likes to be called "No. 1 Roosevelt man in the United States." In his eyes the President is a saint. With two more years to serve as mayor, with no immediate personal fortunes at stake in this campaign, Kelly has nevertheless lost no opportunity to preach the gospel according to Roosevelt.

One night last week he junketed 300 miles to Moline, carrying along a huge photograph of Roosevelt to display on the platform, to deliver these sentiments:

"Roosevelt is my religion and I'd die for President Roosevelt just as I'd give my life for my country . . . I went to the White House and asked the President if he was going to run, and he said he wouldn't run for a third term. I said to President Roosevelt: 'That's not for you to decide. You're not going to have anything to say about it. You've got to run. We're going to draft you, and you're going to be a soldier and do your duty when your country calls.'"

Horner is less eloquent, but the message is the same. Says his organization's campaign newspaper: "The administration of President Roosevelt has protected and preserved our democracy . . . The voice of Roosevelt is the voice of humanity. Vote the Roosevelt ticket. Ask for a Democratic ballot."

Senator James M. Slattery has sounded a familiar phrase: "He kept us out of war." And campaign literature for Harry Hershey, regular Democratic candidate for Governor, describes him as "springing from the same Pennsylvania Dutch background that characterizes President Franklin D. Roosevelt." Political folders compare Hershey's and Roosevelt's smiles, find them similar.

"Roosevelt and Humanity Ticket" is the official slogan of the regular Democratic (Kelly-Nash and Horner alliance) slate. Even candidates for municipal judgeships are listed on this "Roosevelt and Humanity Ticket."

KELLY-NASH have made their sacrifices for the sake of F. D. R. John Stelle, their lieutenant governor in a Horner administration, was ripe to succeed to the Governor's mansion this year, particularly since Horner was too ill to run for renomination. But Horner flatly refused to have any part of Stelle and rather than have a factional fight which would detract from the Roosevelt build-up, Kelly-Nash made peace with Horner and backed the Horner-selected State slate.

John Stelle meanwhile announced his independent candidacy for the Democratic primary. His campaigning has been vigorous and vitriolic. For four years he had been a solid Kelly-Nash man, even abstaining from taking over the State government during Horner's five-month illness in Florida. Horner, to reciprocate, would not enter his machine in the 1939 Chicago mayoralty election which Kelly-Nash considered its lifeblood. Now double-crossed by his sponsors in the interest of party harmony—i. e. Roosevelt—Stelle has shouted throughout the State of the evil machine politics of Ed Kelly's big city gang, and has added an anti-Semitic innuendo against Horner's "bedside cabinet"—consisting principally of Finance Director Sam Nudelman and Tax Commission Chairman Charles K. Schwarz.

Stelle's biggest pull is down-State and considering his lack of organization support, has made a strong campaign. As the Kelly-Nash candidate for Governor, he could likely have swept the Chicago gang into control at Springfield. But even this beckoning opportunity Ed Kelly passed up. He has said he would give Roosevelt his life (which would make him the second Chicago mayor to do so.) Already he has probably sacrificed the Illinois governorship.

And even John Stelle is promoting Roosevelt, though tacitly since all his oratory is spent on the Kelly-Nash and Horner alliance. Likewise other insurgent Democrats either indorse or evade the issue; Roosevelt is too big a drawing card for a practical Illinois Democrat to fight against.

ON THE REPUBLICAN side, as would be expected, Roosevelt is still the issue. But no one has put up a candidate specifically against him. Dewey's campaign is a solo; local Republicans haven't made a real issue of him. Hence, the primary shapes up as Roosevelt versus anti-Roosevelters, not personality against personality.

No one doubts he will carry the Democratic primary. Kelly-Nash have long demonstrated they can get out the vote in gargantuan proportions. Straw polls give Garner around 10 per cent. Kelly-Nash and Horner sources are a little more generous, but they are counting on at least a 5-to-1 majority. Anything less will be a moral defeat.

As the Garner men say, the tip-off will come in comparing Roosevelt's versus the sum of Dewey's and Garner's votes. In primaries two years ago the Democrats polled 1,744,005, more than twice the G. O. P. count. Loss of at least 100,000 votes in Cook County (Chicago) is conceded this year by Kelly-Nash experts; downstate the swing may be even greater. That makes their problem all the tougher. If Roosevelt is to win, the total Democratic vote must be at least half again as big as the Republican total. Despite the phenomenal Kelly-Nash and Horner abilities at getting out the vote, April 9 is going to be a troublesome day.

Hanging onto Roosevelt coattails has been good politics in Illinois since 1932. This year's primary is far more than a coattails act. The two most potent organizations in Illinois politics, both rating high in any national list, are running heavy interference for the President. If Roosevelt gets beaten this Tuesday—if he gets less than 83 per cent of the Democratic vote or less than Dewey and Garner combined—it will be a sound, decisive licking. And he won't be able to say his Illinois friends didn't try.

Masters Of Chaos

By the Associated Press

Study of Dictators

A DICTATOR, says a Nebraska sociologist who has studied 35 such regimes, "must be a genius of a sort."

They combine "diabolical cleverness, arrogance, the love for intrigue, unscrupulousness, a bent toward strategy, a fanatical idealism, along with hardshell realism, and the ability quickly to utilize every advantage," writes Prof. J. O. Hertzler, in the current issue of the American Sociological Review.

"In general, dictators are not the kind of men who would be ruling in more normal times. On the whole, whether we like to admit it or not, they are abler than those necessary in more normal times. Many men can fit into a well-organized going concern, but the man who can organize chaos must be a genius of a sort."

ASSERTING virtually every dictatorship examined has been preceded by a period of confusion and emergency which terminated in crisis, the University of Nebraska professor points out, however, that "history shows when a society has achieved normality, it has discarded dictators and set up a system of 'checks and balances.'"

In his survey covering the governments of ancient Greece and Rome as well as those of the present, Hertzler says "the close relationship between revolution and dictatorship should be noted particularly."

Exploring not only the reasons behind dictatorship but their governments, Hertzler believes that to be successful, "a dictator must always act as if an emergency existed."

"He must and often does manufacture emergencies to justify his own existence, especially in the form of war and war scares," Hertzler writes, pointing out there is always "too much use of the concentration of power principle and the development of what might be called the executive 'frame of mind.'"

WHAT HAPPENS to a dictator when he is no longer accepted by the people?

Hertzler says he has "one of these three choices: (1) He may try to convert his rule into a dynasty as Augustus and Reza Shah Pahlevi succeeded in doing, and as Napoleon Bonaparte and Louis Napoleon tried to do; or (2) he may arrange to die, in bed, before the emergency passes, as did Cromwell, Richelieu, Lenin, Pilsudski, Gomez and Kemal Ataturk; or (3) he may leave quickly before the 'break' comes, preferably under cover of darkness, for Paris, that haven of former absolutists and other dispossessed rulers, as did Diaz and several other Latin American dictators."

Otherwise, the sociologist concludes, "he will suffer: (a) Forcible detention or exile; or more likely, (b) be the victim of his own favorite device, namely, sudden and violent 'liquidation.'"

Books And Things

Swedish Pioneer Days

IT IS AN INTERESTING commentary upon a contemporary state of mind that our visions of the future—at least as reflected in fiction—should hold so little hope. The days of "Looking Backward" are gone—even the comparative optimism of the Wells of "In the Days of the Comet." When our novelists look forward—except in the comic strips—they look forward to a world of smash, ruin and desolation. They can write of the past with security and warmth, of the present with suspicion, but of the future only with dread. Or so it seems, from the samples on one reviewer's desk.

Let us take past first. In "The Winds of Spring" (Macmillan, $2.50), Walter Havighurst has done a sound and interesting novel of Swedish pioneer days in early Wisconsin. Jan Sorensen went looking for a roseate gull in Lapland—he found it, and found, as well, the preasant girl, Margaretta, who changed the course of his life. Together, Jan and Margaretta set out for the New World across the water—Jan in his brass-buttoned scholar's coat that made him a laughing stock among huskier and more acquisitive pioneers.

Mr. Havighurst has tried to do a pioneer novel from a new and interesting angle—the angle not of the inarticulate land seeker but of the educated man, doing his best to adjust himself to the raw exigencies of a pioneer environment. Jan Sorensen is a sort of Swedish-American Audubon, more interested in birds than in acres and passing on his scientific spirit to his neighbor's son, David Wick. Unfortunately, while Mr. Havighurst's idea is interesting, his construction is fairly conventional. The Wisconsin neighbors come alive in their earthiness. Peter Lund and Matts Tornbom, Mons Murjek and Jeppe Meraker, hobbling along on his two stumps, going blind in the end but refusing help because of a certain stubbornness in his soul. But Jan remains more or less the picture of a naturalist and Margaretta the unappreciative but finally understanding wife. Somehow, the neighbors add up to more than Jan, in spite of Mr. Havighurst's intention.

THE NORMAL incidents and accidents of early settlement are well described—there is a fine and genuine feeling for landscape and country. There is also the Chicago fire, brought in for no particularly valid reason—and a plot that is never quite centered, but wanders off into bypaths, to the detriment of the novel as a novel. A good book, with a nostalgic flavor, it misses size and intensity. Yet Jan—and his neighbors—hoped for something. They hoped that the future, if not the present, would repay them.

Desmond Holdridge writes very much better than Mr. Havighurst, with an easy, ironic neatness that is almost too pat. He tells a fable for our time, the fable of Manoel de Deus, an obscure little Indian from the hills of Brazil, thrust into civilization by accident and finally crushed between its wheels. When Manoel was the boy known as Little Son he had no knowledge of his actual age, nor did his mother; the people counted with their fingers and toes and any number above 20 was indicated by a handful of hair. "He knew nothing of fascism and communism, of streetcars or ice, and when he came to encounter them they were all equally strange to him." He needed a principal man—a decent and kindly ruler—and found one in Lisboa, the master of the "Tupan." But the chieftains and orators—green-shirts, communists, men of ill-will of every sort from Mister, the savage chieftain, to the Three Crocodiles, who were stevedores, beset, befooled and finally murdered him, just when he was ready to settle down with his Teresa and enjoy a man's work and a man's reward.

So, says Mr. Holdridge, it will be with "all those common folk who, denying their souls because they also have bellies, meditate abandoning their principal men in order to embrace the deadly promises of a chieftain." The thesis is hard to refute and he has told his story of a jungle-Candide with wit, excitement and grace. It may be murmured, however, that the final catastrophe in "End of the River" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50) is so deliberately planned by the author that the reader revolts against it.

When The Cash Goes

By Mark Sullivan

Regarding Allied Purchases

THERE IS a condition which the United States will be obliged to meet, if the war in Europe continues a year or more. This condition is just dawning upon Government officials and thoughtful persons. It may become tangible and need to be met in a shorter time than a year.

Britain and France are buying supplies in the United States. For these supplies they are paying cash, because our neutrality law forbids American citizens to sell goods to a nation at war on any basis except cash.

The cash which Britain and France pay for supplies from America is, in a sense, a special kind of money. (I put it thus to avoid the mysteries of international exchange.) It is the kind of money that one country can send to another country. In the present case it must be dollars: Britain cannot pay an American manufacturer with pounds.

Internally, within Britain, the government can buy from its own citizens with pounds. For her internal purchases the government can, in one way or another, produce as many pounds as it needs. If the war lasts long enough, the British government, and also the French, may be obliged to organize its currency and economy such as Germany has—on a semi-Communist basis. By these methods, there is practically no limit to what a country can buy within its own borders.

But buying from America is a different matter. For purchases made in America, Britain must produce dollars. How to get these dollars will in time become a problem to Britain. After that it will give rise to a problem for the United States to decide for itself.

FOR PROCURING dollars, Britain has three main methods. One is to send gold to America, and turn it into dollars.

By a second method, the British government requires its citizens to turn over to the government such stocks and bonds of American corporations as they possess. The British government takes these stocks and bonds and sells them in America. Thus she acquires dollars.

A third method of acquiring dollars is by sending goods here, just in the ordinary course of peacetime trade, such goods as textiles, hardware and the like.

Now all these methods of getting dollars are limited, and will in time peter out to almost nothing. The amount of gold Britain has is limited. The amount of American stocks and bonds she has taken over from her citizens is a fixed quantity. The amount of goods she can send to America is limited, because her labor and factories are absorbed in making war supplies.

When and if Britain comes to the end of her capacity for getting dollars, how can she buy anything in America? As things stand she can buy nothing here. The only other way would be to buy on credit. And she cannot buy on credit. Two of our own American statutes stand in the way. Under our neutrality law, no American can sell goods to Britain except for cash. Under a second law, the so-called Johnson act, no American can loan money to Britain (which would be the same as selling to her on credit). The Johnson act forbids any American citizen to loan money to any nation which in the past has been indebted to the Government of the United States and has defaulted, in payment. This covers both Britain and France. Both have defaulted in payment of money they borrowed from our Government during the World War.

WHEN THE CONDITION becomes actual, when Britain has exhausted her ability to pay cash, when she can only buy at all if she is permitted to buy on credit—when that arises, what will we do? Will we repeal the Johnson Act and also the cash requirement of the neutrality act? We will be tempted to, because we will be—indeed, we already are—selling great quantities of goods to Britain; and these sales are providing employment to hundreds of thousands of men, in airplane factories, steel mills and the like. Will we be willing to see this employment suddenly interrupted?

There will be another motive. When this situation arises—assuming it does arise as now seems probable—it will be apparent that Britain is having a hard time in the war. The mere coming to the end of her cash will be a sign she is having a hard time. If and when that occurs, many of our people are likely to say, "Let her have the goods on credit, it will help her win the war."

If we extend credit at all, it would probably have to be, not private credit but Government credit. The amount of credit Britain could get from private American citizens, from bankers and the like, is not great. The total amount that American bankers and private citizens loaned to the Allies in the World War was less than a billion dollars. A billion dollars would not be enough to count greatly. After we entered the war, and our Government began to lend, the amount ran to some ten billions.

I have pictured this as a condition that will arise in a year or so. Actually, one phase of it has arisen already.

Britain, having only limited cash to buy abroad, distributes her purchases carefully. She buys airplanes from us, because we are the best makers of planes. But tobacco, for example, she buys from Turkey—Turkey is Britain's associate in the war, and Britain must favor her.

This leads to outcry, from American tobacco raisers, and other farmers, in the Midwest. They say to Britain, in effect, "Why don't you buy more farm products from the United States?" Britain replies, in effect, quite understandably, "We will buy your farm products if you give us credit."

A Forgotten Art Lives Again in Alaskan Forest

Sons of the Alaskan Indian tribes who a generation ago were led by missionaries from their old spirit gods—their totem poles—are today restoring the relics of their pagan past and rejuvenating an almost forgotten art.

Young Indians, who have retained the skill of totem carving, have been enrolled by the Civilian Conservation Corps and, under the direction of the United States Forest Service, are renovating and re-erecting the poles in villages in Tongass National Forest where present day tribes live.

Discovered in the old Indian villages and burial grounds near Ketchikan and Wrangell, where they were erected by the Thlinget, Hyda and Tsimshian tribes, the totem poles are being restored in workshops in the Saxman Indian village. The young Indians have put into use the secrets of their tribes for obtaining pigments from rocks and soil, in hidden locations, for use in painting

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Asks: "What Is Personality and How Can It Be Developed in Its Most Pleasing Form?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: All sorts of unusual questions reach your desk; so may I ask one which has puzzled many, to-wit: "What is personality?" Recently, I have come in contact with a woman whose "personality" is a great handicap to her. Naturally, one cannot tell her that her repulsive personality drives people from her, and so she remains unaware of her greatest social difficulty.

I recognize in her case an overwhelming amount of conceit and lack of interest in the problems or accomplishments of others. Yet she constantly remarks how "big hearted" she is; and how lacking in boldness. Hearing her, I was glad (for the first time) of my own inferiority complex, which I had always considered a grievous handicap—but which doesn't drive people away.

Will you give your readers your opinions of "personality," and how it can be obtained in its most pleasing form? Is it the unconscious product of environment and experience? Or it is a deliberately cultivated veneer? Or is it a reflection of our intrinsic character, of which we ourselves are unaware? I will think you for a discussion of these puzzling questions. X. Y. Z.

Personality Is Unaware Projection of Soul-Picture

DEAR X. Y. Z.: When we speak of an individual's personality, we have reference to the general pattern of his emotional trends and behavior tendencies—which may be, on the whole, either pleasing or displeasing. However, the term as popularly and favorably employed, connotes distinction or excellence of personal and social traits; the possession of magnetic personal qualities.

I suppose personality and "temperament" are closely allied; and the dictionary defines "temperament" as "the frame of mind or type of mental reactions characteristic of an individual; the peculiar physical and mental character of an individual." And when we investigate the precise meaning of character (in the social), we find that it is "the stamp of individuality impressed by nature, education or habit."

Personality, then, is the expression-through-performance of the individual's predominant attitude toward life and humankind. And it is as much the "reflection of intrinsic character" (to use your words), as it is the "unconscious product of environment and experience." I consider it a mistake to associate personality with "a deliberately cultivated veneer" of supposedly ingratiating mannerisms; since the exact definition of "veneer" is "meretricious(i. e., false, gaudy, deceitful) surface show." The person whose outward behavior is a cloak to prettify his less presentable inner attitudes is a hypocrite, pretender or poseur—who fools few and automatically alienates most; particularly those whose habitual integrity prompts them to value integrity in others.

"Personality in its most pleasing form" is exemplified by those individuals who unconsciously win respect, affection and loyalty because of their meritorious character, natural sweetness of disposition, rational and happy mental outlook and generously cooperative social attitudes. Also, it is a truism that in order to be attractive to others, we must be "interested in" others. And "interest" is defined as "excitement of feeling, accompanying special attention to some object (or individual)."

This suggests that the phenomenon of "magnetic personality" is, really, the projection upon one's environment of the true picture of one's admirable, lovable inner self—and, primarily, an unconscious revelation of self; since the person who is greatly concerned about the impression he is making seldom creates as good an impression as he who forgets himself entirely in an "excitement of feeling accompanying special attention to another."

If you would develop personality in its most pleasing form, therefore, it appears that you should assiduously cultivate praiseworthy character, healthy emotional attitudes which are synonymous with cooperative social attitudes, and a positively happy mental outlook—and thereafter forget yourself, in company, by turning your attention completely outward in a cordially receptive address to the "personalities" of others. Delectable Puffs

Make Spring Dessert

Cream puffs with Honey Butter Sauce sound just like a sunshiny spring day—and they are just as welcome. With eggs now being sold at an interesting price, there is no more alluring way to incorporate them into the diet. This is how you make them:

Cream Puffs with Honey Butter Sauce—Melt ½ cup butter in 1 cup boiling water over direct heat. Add 1 cup flour all at once and stir vigorously until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan in a smooth mass. Remove from heat and beat in 1 egg at a time, until 4 are used, beating after each addition until very smooth. Shape in rounds on a greased cooky sheet, heaping well in the center. Bake at 425 degrees until the tips are light brown, then at 325 degrees until free from beads of moisture. When done, a puff lifted in the hand will feel light. Cut a slit in the side of each and press open lightly to remove steam. Cook, fill with ice cream, custard or shipped cream. Spoon over the sauce.

Honey Butter Sauce—Beat 1 egg until very light and then beat in ¼ cup butter. Gradually pour over 1 cup strained honey, heated, and continue beating until smooth.

A Nippy Frosting

When a different and nippy frosting is needed for a cake, use a package of cream cheese as the basis. Cream one 3-ounce package of cheese, and gradually beat in 2½ cups confectioners sugar, pinch of salt and 1 tablespoon lemon juice, beginning and ending with the sugar.

Simple Coat, 'Silly' Hat, Style Formula

Frances Cookman Gives Tips for Wearing Tailored Things Effectively

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

"If you wear a fancy coat this spring and a fancy hat, you will look like a cartoonist's version of a Broadway beauty. If your coat is fancy and your hat too plain, you will look dowdy. But, if you wear a well-cut coat or suit and a lovely, silly little hat, you will be smartly groomed anywhere."

Marshall Adams

These observations and others equally worth considering were made by the pretty post-deb daughter of Helen Cookman, designing expert on clothes for the tailored woman. Frances, or "Fannie" Cookman is still in her twenties and looks more like a well-cared-for debutante than like a publicist, showroom model, "advance representative" and saleswoman that she is for her mother's line of ladylike tweeds.

How to Wear Suits

The slender, immaculately, groomed Miss Cookman, a visitor in Washington this week, was overflowing with practical hints on the wearing of your new topper or suit, much of this advice derived from her six-year-mother and daughter business partnership. Here are her tailor-made tips:

The short, thick-figured woman should never wear horizonal lines. Her coat should be beltless, preferably of dark, dull surfaced woolen.

The tall, slender woman, unless a perfect 36, usually requires fullness across the bustline and widened shoulder pads.

The mature, top-heavy figure must be certain her coat is long enough over the bust to prevent a drawn look. She should avoid trimming at the top of her coat or suit, better yet, trimming of any type at any time. Her collar must be very simple so as not to call attention to a thick neck.

For the Matron

The matronly figure with narrow shoulders and wide hips must depend on shoulder padding to make her pear-shaped figure look triangular.

This tip doesn't come from the reserved "Fannie" Cookman, but if, like her, you're about 5 feet 5, have no tummy, hips or waistlines to be obsessed with, you can wear natural covert cloth suits with longer jackets, neutral bone buttons and swashbuckling saddle pockets this spring or nubby checked tweeds for a swinging young topcoat designed for country paths and paddocks.

When you come to our lovely Little Church 'Round the Corner to be married next June, if you do, you will see the Chapel of the Holy Family, which contains the bride's altar, all redecorated and beautiful. A lovely spot. The newly done chapel was reopened the day Dr. Randolph Ray celebrated his seventeenth anniversary as rector. He came from the deanship of a Texas cathedral. The Little Church is Hall's parish church, and occasionally he looks wistfully at the chapel and says it must be great to be a young bride. Humph for him!

Women on juries are not 100 per cent hits, if you'll ask Judge Hillard of our suburban White Plains. The other day, he directed a verdict, taking it out of the jury's hands. So up piped Jurywoman Mrs. Eugenia Behrens, "Rotten!" Probably a stuff-shirted American courtroom was never so shocked before. The clerk nearly swooned. The judge turned purple. Mrs. B. was rebuked, but that's the way we girls are. If we feel contemptuous of a court, we outs with it. And maybe we'll get in pokey for it, too. But what of it?

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

'The Year's at the Spring'

Fewer dancing nymphs and out-of-town visitors and more folding chairs and hot dog sandwiches is the spring platform of Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, indefatigable crusader.

Mrs. DeGoofey

At her press conference yesterday, the dauntless founder and president of the Do Something About It League, announced that she was starting a reform of spring social activities.

"What with cherry blossom visitors, lawn fetes, pageants, garden and old house tours—to say nothing of such exhausting indoor events as commencements, showers and weddings—life is simply becoming too complex for Washington women," declared Mrs. DeGoofey.

"You surely don't intend to abolish the cherry blossoms!" exclaimed a civic association editor.

"No indeed, but I intend to open a sanitarium to which Washington housewives may repair as soon as their cherry blossom guests have left town. What is more, I intend to simplify this whole cherry blossom procedure by establishing a downtown studio where anyone may step in and be photographed under a branch of real cherry blossoms. My studio then will take charge of mailing these photographs to the subject's relatives, in-laws, friends and enemies throughout the United States."

To Discourage Overnight Guests

"What about the entertainment problem of the cherry blossom visitors?" asked a food editor.

"I have handled that problem exhaustively in my book, 'Capital Menaces,' in the chapter entitled 'Eradication of the Overnight Guest.' However, the Do Something About it League is offering a special service in that line this spring—namely guides in seven league boots who will escort too persistent visitors on lengthy sight-seeing tours on foot. Any hostess may turn her guests over to one of our guides, and we will guarantee that those guests will not return next spring.

"However, my reforms will not stop with cherry blossom visitors. I particularly want to do something about the highbrow outdoor fete which in a few weeks will become a grave problem."

"But don't you think a lot of people enjoy fetes and pageants?" protested a club editor.

"The people in them enjoy them—and possibly their mothers" was the reply. "But nine out of ten spectators would rather be at a movie—or even a prize fight. However, no one ever says so publicly for fear of being thought a low brow. Now I have been waging campaigns against these events for years—futilely, may I say; women being what they are—and so I have decided that the only thing to do is to make things as easy as possible for the spectators.

"Now, for one thing I intend to see that seats are provided for everyone at these events so that guests will not have to hobnob with spiders, chiggers, ants and other unwanted intimates. I also intend to sponsor the serving of more substantial refreshments—more hot dogs, barbecued sandwiches and coffee, and fewer cheese sticks and lavender sherbets.

Tricycles for Dowagers

"Another plan of mine is to provide large tricycles for women who go on garden tours. The footwork at such events is so exhausting, especially to dowagers with embonpoint, and I feel that the wider use of the tricycle or coaster wagon, or even the scooter, would facilitate movement about the large estates whose absentee owners open them for benefits."

"What about your political plans, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a White House correspondent.

"I will have an important announcement along that line soon," was the reply. "At present I am busily engaged on my plans for May 1."

"Do you plan a blitzkrieg?" asked a foreign correspondent.

"No, I am going to lead the Do Something About It League's annual May Pole dance on Haines Point."

Housewife Role Reducing to Actress

By Ida Jean Kain

THE PLAY, "Life With Father," is so furious that Dorothy Stickney, the leading lady, is losing weight. She assures us that never in her life has she played a part in which she got so much physical exercise—and her role is that of a housewife!

Every time father explodes, which is frequently, it is her cue to dash up or down the stairs to see what's wrong now. In each performance she sprints up and down 23 times, and on matinee days the number is doubled!

Climbing stairs takes about 15 times as much energy as walking on a level. Descending takes about three times as much. And fast movements use about three times as much energy as slow movements. When everything is figured out, Miss Stickney burns from 800 to 1,000 calories per performance in this running hit.

Weight Drops 10 Pounds

That is enough to get anyone's weight down, and in the first few weeks the leading lady lost 10 pounds. Instead of the usual size 14, she now wears a size 12. She lost 2 inches off the waist and 3 off the hips just like lightning and nobody has ever been known to object to slimming those two measurements.

DOROTHY STICKNEY

But Miss Stickney does want to gain back a few pounds, and at this point in the interview she turned the tables and questioned your dietitian. She wanted to know, as many of you do, how weight can be gained when the appetite is inequal to the extra calories required.

Lack of appetite is a sign of a vitamin B1 deficiency and in this case the deficiency is easily explained, for with increased activity there is a parallel increase in the need for B1. The first thing to do is to step up the B1 content of the menus by using the best food sources—liver, kidneys, peas, lean pork, whole grains and yeast. Other good food sources are vegetables, fruit, milk and eggs.

Improves Appetite

An amazing improvement can be effected in the appetite merely by building the menus around these vitamin B1 foods. It may be necessary, however, to supplement the menus with a concentrated form of vitamin B1.

The most effective way of boosting the calorie intake is by slowly increasing the easily digested fats—milk, cream and butter. Three whole glasses of milk, each reinforced with a tablespoon of cream, would supply 660 calories daily. Another 500 calories could be obtained by taking an extra slice of whole wheat bread and an extra pat of butter at each meal.

Rest is essential to offset physical exertion. The perfect plan would be to move a cot outdoors, wrap up snugly, and lie down on it for an hour or two each day. A daily siesta is not possible with many jobs, but the plan can be put into effect over week-ends

Society Women to Fly Over Capital April 22

Members of Committee on Participation In New York World's Fair Will Be Taken On Mass Courtesy Flight Following Meeting

By Hope Ridings Miller

A NUMBER OF well-known Washington women will be up in the air on Monday, April 22, when Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., and members of the D. C. Committee on Women's Participation in the New York World's Fair enjoy a courtesy flight over Washington. The trip will follow a special meeting which Mrs. Glover, chairman, has called for 3:30 p. m.

At that time also plans will be announced for a mass flight of members of the committees in all States to the opening of the Fair on May 11. The huge air cavalcade, by women only, will surpass anything of its kind ever attempted.

Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, who has succeeded Mrs. Vincent Astor as chairman of the national advisory committee, recently completed arrangements for the mass flight after a conference with high-ranking women pilots and aviation authorities.

Many Notables on Committee

The "air meeting" at Mrs. Glover's home on April 22 will be climaxed by the courtesy flight. Also on the program will be a speech by a member of the central advisory committee who will come to Washington especially for the meeting.

When the planes take off from Washington for other cities throughout the country on May 11 passengers will include State chairmen and members of their committees. To provide transportation all the major airlines will be called into service.

On the opening day of the Fair last year, a number of Washington women attended the tea given by Mrs. Astor in the building of the women's national advisory committee. The District of Columbia committee was named last year, but for the coming season there have been a number of changes on the list of 100 women.

Among those now on the committee are Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. George Marshall, Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, Mrs. McCook Knox, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Adolph Casper Miller, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. Randolph Blinn, Miss Rose Greeley, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Miss Anne Carter Greene, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Mrs. George Garrett, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. G. Howland Chase and Mrs. Whitman Cross.

Mrs. Garner Attends Luncheon

MRS. JOHN NANCE GARNER, who keeps her social calendar as slim as possible, does take time out regularly for one party besides the regular Senate Ladies' Luncheon Club at which she presides on Tuesdays. The second Monday in each month she can always befound lunching with wives of the Texas Congressional delegation.

Yesterday the group met at Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern and had a number of guests—all Texans—with them. Mrs. Garner, as usual, sat at the right of one of the hostesses of the day, Mrs. Clyde L. Garrett.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who has charge of the get-togethers, appoints two women to take over arrangements each month, and Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Wright Patman were at the helm yesterday. Mrs. Ewing Thomason and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson will be hostesses next month.

Among those present yesterday in addition to wives of Texas members of Congress were Mrs. Alvin Wirtz, wife of the Undersecretary of the Interior; Mrs. Charles H. Leavell, of El Paso, who has been the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. James Pope, at Fort Myer and is now visiting Mrs. Thomason, and Mrs. Robert Barker, of Fort Worth.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins will entertain at dinner this evening . . . Speaking of dinners—one of swankiest in Washington this season was given by the Italian Ambassador and Donna Elly Colonna on Saturday. Guests included the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre Santander; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss . . . Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen will entertain at a dance at the Army-Navy Country Club tomorrow evening . . . The Candian Minister, Loring Christie, has cards out for a dinner on Monday, April 15 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Duggan will have a few friends for tea tomorrow afternoon at their home on Cathedral avenue . . . Mrs. Sheridan Downey will entertain at luncheon tomorrow at the Congressional Club, and Mrs. Adrien Busick will be hostess at luncheon on Friday.

Mme. Procope Takes First Official Trip; Finnish Minister's Wife to Study Language

MME. PROCOPE, who has been chatelaine of the red brick Finnish Legation for exactly three days, packed up yesterday for her first official trip. She accompanied her Minister-husband to Philadelphia, where he addressed the Swedish Colonial Society.

At the legation before her departure, I found the bride of Washington's handsomest diplomat busy writing a letter home on the typewriter—her favorite method of correspondence. Mme. Procope addressed in Swedish the maid who every few minutes brought in a huge florist's box of flowers sent to her mistress. She speaks three other languages—French, German and Italian—but so far knows only half a dozen Finnish words. Fortunately she has a facility for languages so isn't appalled at the thought of learning her husband's, which she intends to study.

One of the first trips she and the Minister made on their return to Washington was to a newsreel theater to see their wedding pictures. They were so thrilled with the roses sent them by the White House that when they posed after the ceremony they carefully arranged the bouquet behind them on the piano so it would show in the pictures. As she already had her own bridal bouquet, Mme. Procope did not carry the Roosevelts' flowers at the ceremony, but took them along on her honeymoon.

In England, Mme. Procope's chief interest was foxhunting, which she did four or five times a week. She kept her own horses at her mother's home in Yorkshire. (Incidentally, her brother is the high sheriff there). She was interested to hear that she can get plenty of her favorite snort down Virginia way, but so far hasn't given the matter much thought.

"And after all, horses are pretty expensive, aren't they?" she added.

IF THE ENGLISH GIRL hadn't chanced to attend a certain finishing school in Paris, she might never have become Mme. Procope. At this establishment her best friend was a Finnish girl, whom she later visited in Helsinki for an entire summer. The pair went on skiing excursions in Lapland and toured the country pretty thoroughly.

"My husband knows more than I do about England, but I think I've seen more of Finland than he has," laughed Mme. Procope yesterday.

Sometime after this, when the sister of her Finnish hostess was visiting London, the then Miss Shaw served as her guide. One afternoon, just two years ago this May, her charge gave a cocktail party, and it was there she met the Minister. When he returned to London later he telephoned her for a date and afterwards she saw him again on another visit to Helsinki.

Miss Meyer Will Be Bride Of P. L. Graham

Post Staff Member To Be Wed in June To Justice Reed's Aide

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer announce the engagement of their daughter, Katharine, to Philip Leslie Graham, son of Ernest R. Graham, of Miami, Fla.

Mr. Graham received a degree from the University of Florida and then attended Harvard Law School from which he was graduated in 1939. He is now a law clerk for Justice Stanley Reed. His father, who is a business man in Miami, is a member of the Florida Legislature.

The wedding will take place early in June.

Lowrie House To Be Opened

A house never before shown will be included in the seventh annual tour of old homes sponsored by the Alexandria Association, which this year will take place April 13.

This is the residence of Consul General and Mrs. W. L. Lowrie at 217 North Royal street. The mansion is built on "lott number 39", which was purchased at the second auction of "lotts" on July 14, 1749, by Henry Salkeld for 23 pistoles. Its history has been traced to 1784, when the house was owned by William Ramsey, but parts of it at least are thought to be older.

The contents of the house form a treasure trove, with original eighteenth century furniture mingled with cabinets from a Turkish harem and fine specimens of European marquiterie. Complete sets of Louis XV and Louis XVI furniture are at home with a desk and lowboy which came over on the Mayflower.

Back in 1790 when Alexandria was a new and busy port, William Lowrey was a town trustee and his lady was among those who received invitations to the birthnight balls at Gadsby's Tavern when Alexandria citizens met to do honor to George Washington.

The wedding of Miss Mary K. Rees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Rees, of Pottsville, Pa., to Francis A. MacFarlane, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. MacFarlane, of Nyack, N. Y., took place here yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at the Church of St. Thomas thet Apostle. The Rev. Joseph Moran officiated in a setting of flowers and palms.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white tulle trimmed in lace and made with a full skirt and short sleeves. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle fell from a headdress of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses and forget-me-nots.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was Miss Mary Higgins, whose frock of blue tulle was made like the bride's. She wore a blue tulle pillbox hat and carried pink roses and forget-me-nots. Charles L. Segersten was best man. The ushers were Richard Rees and Edward Rees, brothers of the bride.

A breakfast in the Palm Room of Hotel Twenty-four Hundred followed the ceremony. Mrs. Rees had chosen a navy blue costume, street length, with a matching lace hat. The bridegroom's mother wore a gray ensemble.

After a motor trip to Florida, the couple will make their home at 2115 P street. As her going-away costume the bride chose a turquoise blue ensemble with hat to match and black accessories. Mrs. MacFarlane attended American University and her husband studied at Princeton Preparatory School, Fordham University, and St. John's Law School.

Army, Navy D. A. R. Unit Hears Congressman

Rep. Jones Discusses 'Philosophies Underlying Modern Revolution;' Local Chapters Prepare For National Society Congress Next Week

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Representative Robert F. Jones, of Ohio, yesterday addressed the Army and Navy Chapter of the D. A. R. following its luncheon meeting at the Army and Navy Club.

Discussing "Philosophies Underlying Modern Revolution," he declared it was important for American individuals to keep their relation to their Government. He added:

"The modern government trend is that of replacing the liberties of thought and action of the people with the freedom of one man to think and act for them. But American individuals should be able to look down from the top and give constructive criticism on how officials are handling their jobs. The press should continue to be able to look with a critical eye at any Government official and print what it believes to be the truth about him."

Cites Limitations Of People's Rights

"The regimes of totalitarianism stay in power by propagandizing their claimed virtues."

"The power of government limits the people's rights of freedom of worship, of assembly, of speech, and of press. In Germany and Russia the hunger and poverty of the people provided the road for Nazism and Communism."

He pointed out the class struggles in several of the countries of the world.

"A few months ago," he said, "Fortune Magazine grouped persons generally according to the part they played in our Nation's economy as its managers, its workers or its victims, the dispossessed. By a vote of five to one, the American people rejected the idea that class, proletariat or plutocrat, existed here. Rather, we regard ourselves as middle-class.

"America is blessed by freedom of press, of speech and of assembly, and American individuals should keep their relation to their Government so they can look down and give constructive criticism on how officials are handling their jobs."

Representative Jones was introduced by Mrs. William Wrightson, Mrs. Frank Clark, regent of the chapter, announced a pilgrimage Thursday under the auspices of the history committee to three historic chapels in Maryland. The group will go first to Addison Chapel, at Seat Pleasant, where women of the parish will serve luncheon; then to St. Barnabas' Chapel, built in 1693, and St. John's Chapel, at Broad Creek, built in 1692.

National Society Convenes Next Week

Activity in the local chapters of the D. A. R. will give place next week to the program of the forty-ninth Continental Congress of the national society in Constitution Hall.

A large number of Washington girls will be among the pages who will serve during the congress. Among the platform pages will be Mrs. Harriet Haig Green, daughter of Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general, and Miss Helen Towner, daughter of Mrs. Frank Towner, chairman of the house committee, and Mrs. Virginia M. Lambert.

Floor pages will include: Mrs. Sarah Louise Berry, Miss Rosalyn Buchanan, Mrs. Marion Lund Buvinger, Mrs. Marion Lund Caldwell, Miss Elizabeth Marie Cupp, Mrs. Evelyn H. Daly, Miss Miriam Wallace Dreifus, Miss Helen Lois Hamblin, Miss Mary Eleanor Hawkins, Miss Evelyn Markham, Miss Edna Millward, Mrs. Regina R. Robey, Miss Caroline Schaller, Mrs. Marguerite Shore, Mrs. Virginia Kincaid Taylor, Miss Margaret A. Turner, Mrs. Virginia G. Whitney and Miss Aileen Wrightson.

Heading the long list of pages selected from every State are the four young women assigned to the president general, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., as her personal pages. These are Miss Ruth S. Madden, Alabama; Miss Jane E. Robertson, Beatrice, Neb.; Miss Mary Jane Stanley, Laurel, Md.; Miss Mary Bashie Steele, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Next Tuesday night the Pages Ball will be held at the Mayflower Hotel. The committee in charge is under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. M. Carrigan, of Washington. Young officers of the Army and Navy, and cadets from military schools will be among the escorts of the pages.

Members of the enthusiastic younger set of the D. A. R. are coming to the Congress Club with plans complete for a lively junior assembly all their own.

It will be held in Memorial Continental Hall on Tuesday afternoon, and junior D. A. R.'s from every part of the country will attend.

Miss Thelma Le Bar Brown, of Olean, chairman of the 1940 junior assembly, will preside. The program, under the direction of Miss Edna B. Millward, of Washington, will feature an historical play.

Monday morning a breakfast for the juniors will be held at the Hotel Mayflower. In the afternoon Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn is giving a tea and reception for all juniors and Congress pages from 4 to 6 in the Chinese room of the Mayflower.

Dr. Groseclose Chides Writers For Despair

Task of U. S. Fiction Is to Create Heroes, Novelist Declares

Decrying the attitude of contemporary fiction as "one of hopeless despair," Dr. Elgin Groseclose delivered a challenge to American novelists in an address before the Professional Writers' Club at the Y. W. C. A. last night. Mrs. William Walter Smith, president of the club, presided.

"Story book characters who are overwhelmed by the force of blind circumstance are a product of the materialistic philosophy of our age, which looks upon results as those of facts and economic forces at play," said Dr. Groseclose, an economist in the Internal Revenue Bureau as well as a successful novelist.

He deplored the fact that this materialistic point of view ignores the moral values of life. In consequence, he continued, "it will never succeed in finding the solution to our problems—problems which will continually increase and multiply until a moral sense is regained and life is looked upon as one of spiritual rather than purely economic values."

"The responsibility, and the opportunity, of American novelists are to portray human beings rather than blind forces," he concluded, "to portray heroes—men who rise above life through the sheer power of the human spirit." Such an approach to fiction offers manifold patterns for development, Dr. Groseclose feels, patterns that will bring out the true spirit and power of man as a living, human being rather than as a creature swayed by mechanical laws which bind the brute forces of the universe.

Dr. Groseclose brings a colorful background to his work—a background that includes a pioneer Oklahoma heritage, graduation from the university there, two years on the staff of a mission school in Persia and arrest by the Russian Cheka on suspicion of espionage.

Club Hears Prof. Cobb

Young people today must be helped, through education, to gain a large vision, and there must be universal culturization and effort toward the cessation of war—the world's greatest need, Prof. Stanwood Cobb, of Cobb School, told members of the woman's Community Club of Kensington yesterday.

Introduced by Mrs. Grace Lewis Ryan, chairman of education, he spoke on "Progressive Education for a Democracy," addressing the monthly meeting of the club, held in the Masonic Hall.

He traced the background of American democracy and ascribed the development of our form of government as it is today to the quests for wealth, democracy and freedom of religion, which brought the colonists to this continent. From these have grown a free spirit and a free educational system which is synonymous with democracy, he said.

"The quest for democracy has eliminated class consciousness and subserviency has practically disappeared. The appreciation of beauty is becoming universalized and we are building a mass culture for all," he said, citing music as an example.

Mrs. Joseph R. Baker presided at the meeting and presented as guests of honor Mrs. Harry Harcum, president director of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, president of the Montgomery County Federation. Mrs. Whalen discussed briefly the Hartshorn Scholarship Loan Fund, maintained by the federation, which has reached $10,000 and has provided scholarship loans for 50 girls. There is also a new fund for boys, not yet in use.

Relief Group Of Auxiliary Plans Musicale

Mrs. Emery Will Give Program for Benefit Of Miners' Welfare

A musicale will be given by Dorothy Radde Emery, pianist, at the home of Mrs. Charles Will Wright, in Kenwood, on Saturday at 8 p. m. for the benefit of the Welfare Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

Mrs. A. George Stern, chairman of this committee, has just returned from a trip to Norton, Va., where she investigated the conditions of the community to which the auxiliary has been sending clothes, money, books and magazines for the past few years. She says 80 per cent of the people are on relief and that the only outside help comes from the auxiliary.

Miss Nannie Kline, who devoted her life to helping these underprivileged people, died last October at the age of 80, having worked up to the day of her death.

Miss Kline's work is being taken over by a young girl, Miss Nova Beane, just out of college. She will receive the sum of $35 per month, and Dr. Phillip Roberts, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Norton, will supervise the welfare work.

The clothing, bedding and linens sent by the auxiliary are bought by people for very little, and the money realized is used for medicines and medical attention for those who cannot afford them. Dr. Roberts told Mrs. Stern he was trying to educate the miners' families in a better way of living, teaching them handicraft and educating them otherwise. The books and magazines sent to Norton will be housed in Miss Kline's house, which is being renovated for Miss Beane.

Mrs. Robert Anderson is chairman of this committee.

Mrs. Emery will have assisting her on the benefit program Saturday her son, Alden H. Emery, jr., who will play several French flute solos. He will also play a flute sonata which was written by Mrs. Emery. Clarke Paulsen, barytone, will sing. Taking themes from the classics, Mozart, Tschaikowsky and Ravel, Mrs. Emery will play the originals and then the modern versions to show how much the old masters influence the modern music.

Chesley, president of the council, together with Mrs. Richard Hynson, president of the alumnae association.

A reception to delegates will take place tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock at which Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lloyd will receive the delegates and guests, and the students will offer a musical program. A tea will be given to the visitors on Thursday afternoon at 4:15 in the field house, at which the home economics department will be host.

Census Takers Count City's Transients

Enumerators Visit All From Swank Hotels To Hobo Jungle Camp

Prince and pauper transients sleeping in the District last night had one thing in common—a nocturnal visit from the census taker.

Every guest of the city, whether in the Central Union Mission at 613 C street northwest, or in a palatial Connecticut avenue hotel, was covered as workers compiling the sixteenth decennial census in every part of the Nation devoted the night to counting an estimated 1,000,000 people in hotels, lodging houses, hobo "jungles," flophouses, tourist and trailer camps.

Guests of hotels here awoke this morning to find that during the night a representative of the census had left a blank in their mail box. This blank had to be filled out and returned to the guest's home town for cross checking. If a hotel occupant indicates on the blank that he has no other home, he will be counted as a District resident.

267 Quizzed at Mission

Guests of the city's mission met the census taker face to face in most cases. At the First Gospel Mission, John Marshall Square, for instance, 267 men passed single file before a long work table set up in a corridor by five census employes under Squad Leader Earl L. Overholt.

There was no grumbling from the men about the questions, said Harvey Prentice, the mission's superintendent. Rather, overeager cooperation was noted.

One gangling, tow-headed North Carolinian insisted on giving involved and sometimes jocular answers to Enumerator Dr. A. Ross Eckler.

A sample:

"Are you single or married?"

"I don't know how to take that."

"Well, do you have a wife?"

"You don't see her with me, do you?"

"No."

"Well, then, I ain't married."

"Did you attend school this year at all?"

"I think I'm about educated."

"Where did you live five years ago?"

An unshaded electric light bulb highlighted the North Carolinian's features as he drawled facetiously:

"In the penitentiary. No, take that back. I never been in jail. I was in Salisbury, N. C., five years ago."

Get Free Supper, Bed

The count took place at the mission just prior to the evening prayer services. All men who stayed for the services were entitled to supper and a bed, free of charge. Mission officials expected to house more than 250 last night.

Besides Overholt and Dr. Eckler, enumerators working last night in this city's largest mission and flophouse district were Ernest McCormack, Glen Taylor and John Durand.

The enumeration district includes the Municipal Lodging House, Rescue Mission, Volunteers of America Mission, the Charles and Mount Vernon hotels, besides the First Gospel Mission. An estimated 480 transients were stopping in these places last night.

Visit Hobo Camp

Other activities in the spot count were visits the census made to a hobo jungle camp on the edge of Anacostia, where the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks converge, and a visit to the trailer camp on Hains Point.

Nationally, no further light had been thrown late yesterday on a charge made Sunday night by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, that the census was designed to "provide the most complete police list in the world."

The Senator, often a critic of "personal questions," asserted that a bill had been secretly prepared by the Department of Justice to permit the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Army and Navy intelligence sections to use information from census returns in connection with suppressing espionage and subversive activities. Attorney General Robert H. Jackson denies the charge, but no further development marked the day, first in the second week of the national count.

5-Cent Milk For D. C. Needy Wins Support

U. S. Marketing Division Approves Plan of Distribution

The sale of milk at 5 cents a quart to underprivileged families in Washington appeared assured yesterday with approval of a distribution plan by the Department of Agriculture's marketing agreement division.

Relief milk sales, provided for in a marketing agreement adopted several weeks ago, have been held up pending approval of a workable plan of distribution and a decision as to eligible recipients.

Director of Public Welfare Robert E. Bondy said the completed plans must yet be accepted by the Commissioners and then sent to Congress for appropriation of funds to carry it out, making uncertain the date when operations will begin. It has been agreed, he said, that persons on the public welfare rolls and WPA eligibles awaiting work assignments will receive benefits of the 5-cent milk.

Under the plan, distributing stations will be set up by the Board of Public Welfare. Bondy estimated 10 stations will be necessary. He estimated between $12,000 and $15,000 would cover costs of erecting the distribution centers and employing personnel to handle them.

Out of 6,500 cases now on public assistance rolls, Bondy said he believed about 3,000 would take advantage of the relief milk sales. The WPA eligibles number 5,000—bringing to 8,000 the total who would purchase the low-cost milk.

Mauna Loa Erupts, Pours River of Lava

By the Associated Press

Hilo, Hawaii, April 8.—A fissure 4 to 5 miles long was opened today on the side of Mauna Loa by an eruption which filled the Mokuaweoweo Crater with molten lava.

The lava began flowing down the mountain in the direction of Kau Desert, on the side opposite the City of Hilo.

A cascade of fire from 150 to 200 feet wide and several hundred feet high issued from the rift in the craetr's side. It was the mountain's first eruption since December, 1935, when lava rivers threatened Hilo.

The erption cracked the back of the mountain, at the south wall of the crater, reported Brig. Gen. Walter H. Frank on returning from a flight over the mountain in an Army bomber.

"It is a terrific spectacle," said Gen. Frank, wing commander at Hickam Field. "The whole crater is filled with molten lava and, as it erupts, it is flowing along the main fissure, which has cracked the back of the mountain."

No earthquakes, such as often accompany volcanic eruptions, could be felt at Hilo, about 45 miles from the crater.

Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, Government volcanologist in charge of the Kilauea Crater Observatory, who predicted the 1935 eruption, said last year another outburst was "overdue."

The last major eruption of Mauna Loa was in December, 1935. That eruption continued more than five weeks and a 600-foot channel of molten rock approached to within 12 miles of Hilo and within three miles of the municipal water reservoirs.

United States Army planes dropped 20 600-pound bombs on the volcano to divert the flow of lava.

2 Ex-Circus Riders Held In Robberies

$1,500 in Goods Stolen by Pair, Fairfax Grand Jurors Charge

Two former "broncho busters" in Tim McCoy's Circus, which folded up in Washington two years ago, were indicted by a Fairfax County grand jury yesterday on charges of stealing over $1,500 worth of riding equipment from three county estates.

Indicted were George Dewey Hafferman, 29, and William H. Vanderwege, 36, both of 1349 Maryland avenue northeast. They were arrested Saturday in Arlington County by H. P. Magarity, Fairfax County Deputy Sheriff and Detective Sergts. Hugh Jones and John Saunders, of Arlington County.

The erstwhile rodeo cowboys were accused of carrying off expensive saddles and other riding equipment from stables of Dr. William McClellan, U. S. Randle and Arthur M. Schuerman.

Ray Mills, of near McLean, Va., was indicted on a charge of "counselling, hiring and procuring" 16-year-old Robert Russell, of near Falls Church, to set fire to a barn, April 1. Russell was indicted on an arson charge.

2 Quizzed in Death

Two colored men, arrested early Sunday in the murder of Stanley Webley, 32, of Sterling, Va., were questioned for several hours yesterday in the office of Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown, of Fairfax County, but no charges were lodged against them.

Police said both men had signed statements, but that their accounts of the fatal shooting in an alley beside the Citizens National Bank at Herndon Saturday night, conflicted. The men were being held in the Fairfax Jail.

The shooting occurred within a few feet of the sidewalk, thronged with Saturday night shoppers. Bystanders said they saw Webley give chase to the colored men after an argument in front of the bank. A moment later, they said, three shots rang out. Webley died en route to Georgetown Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today from the Webley home. Burial will be in Sterling Cemetery.

Surrender Lee Snelling Marks 75th Birthday

Richmond, Va., April 8.—A gray little lady who was born in South Richmond just at the time Gen. Lee gave his surrender to Gen. Grant will celebrate her seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow.

Her name is a constant reminder of the war's end. Her father, bursting with the news just received from Appomattox, received another emotional jolt—he'd just become the father of a girl. On the spot he blurted out:

"We'll name her Surrender Lee."

Mrs. Surrender Lee Fortune Snelling said folks don't make much mention of her unusual name nowadays, but "all the old generation used to think it was wonderful."

Bennett Made Chairman In Bruce Campaign

Frederick, Md., April 8.—Alton Y. Bennett, attorney, today was named Frederick County chairman for the United States Senatorial candidacy of Howard Bruce at a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee. Francis Petrott, Maryland secretary of state, was elected vice chairman, and City Attorney Edward J. Smith was selected temporary chairman of the State Central Committee, filling the vacancy caused by the death of David C. Winebrenner 3d.

Bennett said his elevation to chairmanship of the Bruce campaign committee did not mean he was attempting to assume leadership of the Democratic organization founded by Winebrenner.

Completion Dates Set For Work on Route 250

Safeguards Urged at Fatal Grade Crossing

Prince Georges Commissioners Due to Act Today

Elimination of the hazards of the Melrose grade crossing at Hyattsville, Md., where four persons were killed Sunday morning, will be discussed by the Prince Georges County, Md., county commissioners at their meeting in Upper Marlboro today.

William A. Carson, president of the board of commissioners, said last night that he expects the board to take action today. He said the board will take the initiative whether or not any complaint is filed.

"My reaction is that the crossing should be closely entirely," Carson declared. "However, I know that this will cause considerable uproar amongst those residing and having business in the neighborhood.

Flasher Light Suggested

"If the crossing cannot be closed I believe we should ask the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to provide more adequate protection. Flashing lights such as those at Landover and Branchville crossings probably would be the next best suggestion to maintaining a 24-hour watchman service. I don't believe the railroad would agree to 24-hour watchman service."

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner who issued certificates of accidental death in the tragedy, said he plans to ask the Maryland Public Service Commission to order more adequate protection.

Nealis Services Held

T. Howard Duckett, banker and civic leader, earlier had suggested that the crossing be closed until an underpass could be built about 1,000 feet to the west where the terrain is better suited for such an engineering task.

Four young Washingtonians were killed when their automobile was struck by a New York bound excursion train shortly after midnight Sunday morning. They were:

Leo E. Handley, 20, of 6121 Seventh place northwest.

Mrs. Frances B. Dickenson, formerly Miss Colman, of 715 Dahlia street northwest.

Funeral services for Miss Smith will be at 2 p. m. today at Gasch's funeral home in Hyattsville. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Dickenson Rites Tomorrow

Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Smith, two sisters, Jean and Doris Smith and a brother, Mayo Smith.

Rites for Mrs. Dickenson will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Chambers northwes funeral home. She leaves her husband, Charles Dickenson; her mother, Mrs. Lillian Colman; a sister, Mrs. Helen P. Carter, and two brothers, Albert B. and S. Armistead Colman.

Funeral services for Leo Handley will be held at Perry & Walsh funeral home, 29 H street northwest, at 8:30 a. m. today, followed by requiem mass at 9 a. m. at Nativity Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Registration Drops In Baltimore

Baltimore, April 8 (AP).—Republicans suffered a stiffer percentage loss than Democrats in a 69,366-voter decline under the new permanent registration system.

Eligible voters in Baltimore numbered 308,553 when the books closed Friday night, the board of election supervisors said today. The total under the former system was 377,919.

Republicans suffered a loss of 21,829 voters, the registration falling from 95,976 to 74,147, or 22 per cent.

Democrats numbered 42,330 fewer, declining from 270,520 to 228,190, or about 15 per cent.

"Unaffiliated" voters totaled 6,216, a drop of 45 per cent from the 11,413 registrations in that category under the old system.

Voters wishing to participate in the November general election still may register on one of two days—September 3 or September 7.

Appomattox Doesn't Enjoy Commemorating Surrender

Children Sell Postcards and Musket Balls Amid Markers of South's Defeat 75 Years Ago Yesterday

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Appomattox Courthouse, Va., April 8.—Here, 100 yards from the site of Wilmer McLean's house where the Civil War ended 75 years ago Tuesday, a group of children idled about a bronze plaque on a concrete base, anxiously watching the road.

When an automobile stopped, to disgorge several pilgrims, the children swarmed up. One or two of them rattled musket balls in their hands, expectantly, and salesmanship was in their eyes. Others let perforated postal cards slither out from their hands.

"Now," said the business leader from an adjoining county (who also was an authority on the Civil War), "it is well for you to see the place but there won't be a celebration, I think. Nobody likes to commemorate a surrender. Just over there Gen. Robert Edward Lee, in immaculate uniform, laid down his stainless sword to Gen. Grant. You couldn't have told who Grant was except for his shoulder straps."

9,000 Against 118,000

"Postal cards; you've got to buy these postal cards. Here's the house they surrendered in," said a child. "Here's a bullet one of them must have got shot with," said another.

"We will read the plaque," said the war authority, pushing through the children.

The legend, he read aloud, indicated that the Confederates numbered about 9,000; the Yankees, about 118,000. A farmer came over from a tree he had been leaning against.

"Northern folks laugh whenever they read that. Say we make it plain they had the most folks," he said. "I don't reckon we could beat all them folks."

"Postal cards," said the children insidiously. "They got shot with these bullets right in here."

"Fought to a Frazzle"

"Had they only made the hills," said the war authority. "Let's drive over to the apple tree where Gen. Lee awaited word. They were completely outnumbered. What did Gordon say . . . 'I've fought my men to a frazzle'."

"Postal cards," chimed up the children, "Here's the house."

The car went down a steep hill and to the Appomattox River, a narrow stream. Down stream 10 yards a Civil War cannon was tipped over at the bank, its muzzle under water, but another cannon sat primly on the ground, its muzzle aimed toward the north. Here a farmer came up, as from the ground, and propped his foot on the running board.

"Git out and see the gun," he said. "There wasn't a road by which he could escape,' 'said the war authority.

"How 'bout buying some these bullets. Got some swords, to, and a rifle with a burnet on it," the farmer said.

Watched in Anguish

"I 've fought my men to a frazzle,' Gordon told him. The cavalry persistently brought ill reports. He was nearly surrounded. He watched in anguish from that apple tree up yonder. The apple tree is gone. I can't say with positiveness that the marker is placed correctly."

The farmer leaned inside the car, showing the bullets in his hand. People buy these and make necklaces for their girls. You can hang one on your watch chain."

The farmer gave up after a while and went up the hill, where he could be seen talking to the children. They propped on the concrete base of the plaque, looking up the road for other pilgrims.

The war authority suggested that the pilgrims had better leave and as the car moved past the group on top the hill they all started chanting:

"Look at the tightwads, look at the old tightwads."

Markers and Salesmen

"You see," said the war authority, "there is no one here because no one wants to celebrate a surrender. And there's very little to see at Appomattox, except the few markers and the salesmen. And nobody knows where the place is, back off the main road."

There was little, except the roadside markers and the painting on the front of a filling station of two hands, gripping cordially, topped by the words, "Blue and Gray Filling Station."

"When the Government develops this place and tourists come from north and south, this will be a good corner to straddle the fence on," said the war authority.

$177,200 Allotted For Va. Surveys

Richmond, Va., April 8 (AP).—Gov. Price announced today that the Rockefeller-endowed General Education Board has allocated $177,200 for three related Virginia projects in the study of population especially as it applies to rural areas.

The State planning board will receive $90,000 for its population study.

The University of Virginia will receive $48,800 for the support of a bureau of industrial research which will look for small industries to care for those who may not earn a living on farms.

Virginia Polytechnic Institute will receive $38,400 for a more detailed examination into the matter of land use.

The grants brought to $260,000 the amount voted in the last two years to Virginia enterprises by the general education board.

Reading Habits in U. S. Placed at Low Level

Salisbury, Md., April 8 (AP).—The "average American has the reading habits of a fifth grade child," Dr. John. Morrow told the Eastern Shore Optometric Convention today.

"With this habit we expect him to understand the national budget, spending, democracy, politics, and even to read newspapers—almost an impossibility," he declared.

Dr. Morrow, of the American Optical Co.'s research division at Southbridge, Mass., said experimental data indicates "a large percentage of college students have not attained college reading habits."

Arlington Group Urges Recreation

Special County Division Sought By Civic Units; Hearing Tonight

Efforts to have the Arlington County Board include a levy for a department of recreation in the 1940 budget will be made at a public hearing at 7:30 tonight in the courthouse.

A department of recreation has been advocated for two years by the Arlington Civic Federation, the Organized Women Voters and the Arlington County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations. The recommendation was first placed before the board after a survey of recreational facilities by the National Recreation Association.

$5,000 is Requested

Supporters of the proposal contend an appropriation of $5,000 would be sufficient to get the project under way. The board has been assured that volunteer workers could easily be obtained to assist a full-time professional recreational director. Gymnasium facilities of the public schools and private clubs could be used and the only charge made would be for electricity and janitor service.

The only public recreational facilities at present are the playgrounds, which are open between June 20 and August 31 under supervision of W. A. Richardson, physical education director for the schools.

Hanrahan Backs Tax Rate

Arlington County's present tax rate is $2.70 per $100 of assessed property valuation, including $1.50 for general governmental operations and $1.20 for schools. County Manager Frank Hanrahan has submitted a recommendation to the county board urging retention of the present rate. The budget must be signed by April 30.

Richmond Sewer Tax Held Unconstitutional

Richmond, April 8 (AP).—The brand "unconstitutional" was placed by the State supreme court today on the City of Richmond's sewer tax in its application to vacant and unimproved lots in an opinion handing a legal rebuke to the municipality for its effort to contravene the specific language of the constitution.

Reversing a decision of the Hustings Court of Richmond on an appeal of the Southern Railway Co. that it had been assessed illegally for sewer taxes on three vacant lots in Richmond during 1934, '35, '36 and '37, the supreme court remanded the case for further lower court action.

Champion Fish Cookers To Get Trip on Bay

Annapolis, April 8 (AP).—New York City's champion Boy Scout fish-cookers were offered an added prize today by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland—a five-day fishing trip on Chesapeake Bay.

Recognizing a Scout contest now being sponsored by the New York State Fisheries Council, Gov. O'Conor wrote the council offering the victors a chance at "the world's largest fishin' hole."

He explained the trip would be an expression of thanks, on behalf of Maryland's watermen to the council for its efforts in promoting sale of Maryland sea food.

Maryland Income Tax Yields $6,178,523

Annapolis, April 8 (AP).—For the first time since collection of Maryland's new income tax began, a slight touch of pessimism was noticeable today in the State comptroller's office.

Deputy Comptroller Joseph O'C. McCusker said the State had banked $6,178,523 in cash so far from the tax, still had about 10,000 returns to check through, and still expected to reach the $8,000,000 goal.

He said the revenue estimates were based on the fiscal year—and that the $8,000,000 would be collected by September 30, when the fiscal period ends.

One official commented, "We'll be lucky if we make it."

Alexandrians Try to Collect Unpaid Fines

Bryan, Boothe Order Warrants for Those Named in Report

Efforts to collect $1,639.50 in unpaid fines revealed in a recent audit of the Alexandria civil and police court records were launched yesterday as the city prepared to investigate the auditing report which termed the court's records as being in a "deplorable" condition, and revealed a cash shortage of $203.

At the request of Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan and City Attorney Armistead L. Boothe, Judge William P. Wolls ordered Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, to issue capias against all persons found delinquent in the report, which covered a period of three and a half years from March, 1936, to September, 1939. The defendants will be asked to show cause why the fines were not paid and, under Section 2550 of the code of Virginia, may be committed to jail for failure to pay without just cause.

A list of delinquents furnished the court yesterday by Judge James R. Duncan, of the Civil and Police Court, showed 28 persons had failed to pay fines to the State amounting to approximately $343.50, and 142 were delinquent in fines to the city, owing $1,296.

The action was taken, Judge Duncan said, under terms of the State code which provides that the Corporation Court shall endeavor to collect all fines not paid in the civil and police court.

Meanwhile, a public hearing is to be held this afternoon at 1:30 in the city council chamber on the report of the State auditing committee released two weeks ago by L. McCarthy Downs, State auditof of public accounts. The hearing will be conducted jointly by City Manager Carl Budwesky and City Attorney Boothe.

All persons involved in the auditors report, as well as any other "interested parties," have been invited to attend and present their views, City Manager Budwesky said.

500 Tobacco Men Favor Old System

Prince Georges Growers Ask Return To Hogshead Marketing Method

Prince Georges County, (Md.,) tobacco growers voted yesterday to return to the Colonial system of marketing tobacco at a meeting held in Upper Marlboro, (Md.,) High School.

The meeting was held under auspices of the Prince Georges County Farm Bureau in an effort to determine the sentiment of the growers regarding marketing methods.

The group of nearly 500 tobacco farmers voted almost unanimously in favor of reverting to the 300-year-old hogshead method of sales.

Traces Dissatisfaction

Dr. Harry M. Bowen, county commissioner and one of the largest tobacco growers of the county, presided at the meeting. W. R. C. Connick, president of the farm bureau, traced the dissatisfaction with marketing conditions in Baltimore which led to the decision last year to try the loose leaf sales system used in all other tobacco growing sections of the country.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, pointing out that the farmers' situation now is largely due to his failure to organize for mutual defense, stressed the need for cooperation.

William E. May, commissioner of agriculture of Kentucky, told of conditions in Kentucky where the loose leaf system is in effect. He urged the Maryland farmers to keep their hogshead sales system.

"If you can get 50 out of 100,000 Kentucky tobacco growers to say they like the loose leaf system, I'll resign my position," May declared.

Two Systems Explained

W. B. Posey, tobacco specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service, explained the two systems. He said the hogshead method provides unlimited storage privileges and secret bidding with competitive buying and pointed out that the State provides free inspection and reclamation provisions in the hogshead system. Under the reclamation provision, a buyer whose hogshead of tobacco does not come up to the standard of the sample is reimbursed by the State.

The vote by the farmers indicated that most of them will go to the Baltimore market where the hogshead system is in use rather than to the new commission sheds where the chant of the auctioneer was too unfamiliar for understanding by the Maryland farmers who have been selling in the English tongue for 300 years, they said recently.

Tobacco farmers of St. Mary's, Charles and Calvert counties, who with Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties raise the bulk of Maryland tobacco, will hold similar meetings today and tomorrow. Anne Arundel farmers met last night.

Nats Rally to Defeat Bees for Sixth in Row

Overcome 8-0 Deficit To Win, 14-12

Bloodworth, Walker And Pofahl Stars Of Victory; Haynes Is Shelled Early

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Greenville, S. C., April 8.—After meekly going hitless for three innings, the Nats suddenly reformed today, unloaded a blistering assault on the Boston Bees' pitching and transformed an 8-0 deficit into a 14-12 victory, their sixth straight.

Two thousand Greenville natives were muttering at the helplessness of the Nats, the parent club of Greenville's Sally League team, in the early innings. The Bees were making a shambles of the contest, scoring almost at will against big Joe Haynes while Bill Swift, the former Pirate, was keeping the Nats off the bases.

And then in the fourth the Nats began to unload. They cut a four-run chunk out of the Bees' lead in that inning and in the fifth they zoomed into the lead with a six-run uprising, knocking Swift out of the box. They scored in every inning after the third.

Jimmy Pofahl, Cerry Walker and Jimmy Bloodworth were the strong arm boys in the Nats' attack. Pofahl walloped a three-bagger against the centerfield wall to drive in two runs in the fourth. Walker banged a double against the right center fence in the fifth to send three runs clattering home, and Bloodworth belted a two-run homer over the rightfield wall in the same inning.

Offsetting the Nats' gratifying show of power, however, was the dismal exhibition of Joe Haynes, who Harris mercifully removed from the box in the midst of a Bees' uprising in the fourth after he had yielded eight runs. Haynes gave up 8 of the Bees' 14 hits.

Harris resorted to his Latin legion to halt the Bees. Gilberto Torres relieved Haynes and gave up three runs in the two innings he pitched, but two of them spawned from a wild throw by Cecil Travis. In the last three innings little Rene Monteagudo held the Bees to a single run.

Alphonse-Gaston Act

The Bees first run was a gift affair. George Case waved Buddy Lewis away from a wind-blown fly to right-center by Cuccinnelo and then permitted it to drop safely. In the next inning the Bees banged Haynes for five hits and five runs with the pivotal blows being two baggers by West and Miller and a home run over the rightfield wall by Rookie Chet Ross with one on base. Pofahl's error and West's double gave the Bees two runs in the sixth before Torres relieved Haynes.

George Case started the Nats counter assault in the fourth by making their first hit of the game, an infield tap which he beat out. After Wasdell walked, Walker rapped a single through the box. Then Pofahl banged his triple to center to score the third and fourth runs of the inning. Pofahl was out at the plate when he tried to stretch it to a homer.

The Nats big fifth inning was notable in that it contained only two hits despite the six runs that resulted. Swift walked two hitters and then muffed a throw at first base. With the bases full Walker drove in three pals with a double to right-center, and after Travis prolonged the rally by walking, Bloodworth pumped the ball over the rightfield wall.

The upshot of all that excitement was a 10-8 lead for the Nats. But an inning later they were trailing, 11-10, because the Bees made three hits off Torres and scored two runs

No. 20—Pros Select Toughest Hole in City

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The vote on "The Hardest Hole" of the golf clubs in the District and vicinity concludes a series of 20 stories. Nineteen dealt with the individual clubs and today's final is a consensus of opinion of the selectors

The next time you par the fourteenth hole at Woodmont Country Club, well, stick out your chest and put a ring around the trey, for you have just parred "The Hardest Hole" of Metropolitan Washington's 19 major golf clubs.

A score of professionals and other club officials selected the 224-yard par 3 as the toughest golf hole of the 19, one from each club, that have appeared in story and picture in The Post for the past three weeks. The selection was made at Kenwood Club yesterday, where the pros were guests of The Post at a luncheon. Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, and Ben B. Dulaney, sports editor, also attended.

The selection and the entire series were both on an informal and unofficial basis, but from the amount of discussion that followed publication of each club's representative golf hole, the purpose of creating golf interest was well served. In fact, the boys nearly called for a referee yesterday after a little campaigning preceding the ballots.

10 Had Supporters

The fourteenth at Woodmont was one of three par 3 holes, the other 16 all par 4s. The object was for the professional or golf committee to select the toughest hole, from the standpoint of a good golf hole and still the scene of the fewest pars and birdies. Some strayed from the original theme, such as Chevy Chase, that chose the "best" hole.

Woodmont's delegate was by no means a unanimous choice, however, as ten of the 19 clubs had supporters in the first ballot of the 20 voters. The fourth hole at Burning Tree, a 430-yard par four, and the fourteenth at Woodmont received a like number of votes. All but the two holes involved in the tie were eliminated, and on the second ballot Woodmont's delegate was chosen by a three-vote margin.

19 Holes in Running

The professionals were presented with a list of the 19 golf holes and a short description of each before a vote was taken. In tournaments of informal matches, most of them have played all the other courses.

After the tie, Gene Larkin, Woodmont pro, and Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree, gave a more detailed description of the holes in question before the final vote.

Accuracy the Thing

The fourteenth at Woodmont calls for a driver from the tee most of the time, and the shot stresses accuracy. To the right, a huge trap that runs the length of the green catches a pushed or sliced shot, with a roadway and out of bounds to the right of the trap. To the left the parking lot is out of bounds. Over the green a steep bank makes an approach shot back to the green a difficult one. The green is big and stepped. The drive must be all carry to the green and straight unless a shot with run takes an extremely lucky bounce.

The fourth at Burning Tree is a long, back-breaking par four with woods on both sides and a big trap to the right of the green, halfway down the hill. The green is atop a hill and the drive must also carry a

Carl Guggino Beats Silva By Decision

D. C. Lightweight Wins Third Straight; Silva's Eye Opened

By Al Hailey

Tearing open an old wound over Mexican Joey Silva's left eye in the fifth round with a wild, overhand right, Carl Guggino, Washington lightweight, won his third straight fight at Turner's Arena last night by a ten-round decision.

Guggino finished the fight heaving and puffing, his body glowing from Silva's relentless punching to the midsection and kidneys.

From the opening bell Silva waded in shooting rights and lefts from a crouch and shedding Guggino's looping offerings swung from long range. Twice Guggino drove the tough Mexican back in the first round, but each time Silva came back—once to shake Guggino badly with a whizzing right.

Guggino had a worried look on his face as early as the third round after pumping that looping left—his best weapon, into the Mexican's jaw half a dozen times. Carl's body was a glowing red from Silva's in-fighting.

Maryland Commission Resigns From N. B. A.

Action Climaxes Group's Protestation Of Dethroning of Harry Jeffra; Kennedy Will Introduce Boxing Bill Today

With a bitter denunciation of the National Boxing Association, the Maryland State Athletic Commission struck the latest blow in the battle over the world featherweight championship last night by withdrawing from the N. B. A.

Although Col. Harvey L. Miller, N. B. A. president, said he had not received official notice of the Maryland resignation, Stanley Scherr, chairman of the Old Line State Athletic Commission, informed the Associated Press of that body's action in Baltimore.

The withdrawal of Maryland from the N. B. A. came just as Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy announced he will go before Congress this morning to seek to do "what the N. B. A. has been trying to do for 20 years."

Will Act Today

Kennedy, who was to introduce his bill calling for Federal control and a Federal investigation of boxing yesterday, failed to go before the House. He was tied up in committee meeting all morning and plans to introduce his bill hitting at "boxing monopolies" today.

In an early statement, Scherr accused the N. B. A. of pulling the "rawest deal ever handed a challenger," and then followed this up by announcing that Maryland would get out of the N. B. A.

Outlining at length how Baltimore's Harry Jeffra, who lost an unpopular decision to Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald last summer in Washington, Scherr addressed an open letter to members of the N. B. A. accusing them of an "about face" in fair play.

The N. B. A., after first insisting on a Jeffra-Archibald return fight, turned around, stripped Archibald of his crown and now holds up Petey Scalzo as the man who holds the key to the 126-pound championship, Scherr complained.

Miller Surprised

Scherr said he was informed the N. B. A. was conducting a poll of its membership to determine whether the national body would take no action at present or suspend Maryland until the 1940 national convention in September—at which time final action would be taken.

"I was surprised to hear the Scherr story. He has phoned me repeatedly regarding this," Miller said last night. I had hoped he'd wait until after the Archibald-Jeffra fight actually took place and then we'd get together and send out both sides at once."

Miller pointed out Kennedy has emphasized the N. B. A. is "not perfect, but it invites Congressional investigation."

Scherr's open letter to the N. B. A., said in part:

"This State is not a weak sister of the N. B. A.," the Maryland chairman, Stanley Scherr, said, adding that "the N. B. A. is not going to be given the opportunity to suspend Maryland or take any action it may see fit because we are doing what the N. B. A. promised six months ago."

"The above contestants (Archibald and Jeffra) met for the featherweight title in Washington, D. C., last September 28. Archibald retaining his title. When the decision was announced, fights, etc., broke out throughout Griffith Stadium and the fans refused to leave the park, shouting their protests and disapproval.

"Col. Miller, prompted by his feeling that a great injustice had been done to a challenger, got busy and issued various bulletins denouncing the decision and stating that Jeffra should have been declared the winner. A poll of the N. B. A. was taken as to whether Archibald should be forced to again meet Jeffra in a title bout. The majority ruled in the affirmative. Archibald was ordered to meet Jeffra within 90 days, otherwise the N. B. A. would declare the title vacant and have a three-way fight, including Jeffra, the winner to be the featherweight champion.

"Then Scalzo appears upon the horizon as the mistreated No. 1 challenger, and the entire N. B. A. rushes to the rescue. We have no

Rodak Outpoints Everett Rightmire

Providence, April 8 (AP).—In a dogfight 10-round test Leo Rodak, Chicago lightweight contender, outpointed Everett Rightmire, junior lightweight from Sioux City, Iowa, here at the Rhode Island Auditorium.

Forcing the attack throughout the 10 rounds Rodak nevertheless had a difficult time keeping in front of the smart-stepping Iowan and it wasn't until the final rounds that the Chicago boy established his winning margin. Rightmire bothered Rodak with a snapping left jab and sharp left hook in the early rounds, but tired near the end of the bout as Rodak continued to apply pressure.

Turiello Is Winner Of Philadelphia Bout

Philadelphia, April 8 (U.P.).—Saverio Turiello, Italian welterweight, took a ten-round decision tonight from Joey Ferrando, Jersey City, at Convention Hall.

Turiello, defeated in his last start here for his first decisive setback in more than 100 bouts, took the verdict on the referee's decision when the judges disagreed. Ferrando is a former Ashtabula (Ohio) fighter.

The 'Angel' Wins Again In Worcester Bout

Worcester, Mass., April 8 (AP).—Maurice (the Angel) Tillet, 276, of Paris, pinned Leo Numa, 225, Seattle, Wash., in straight falls here tonight. In the preliminaries, Dutch Hefner, 243, Texas, threw Gene Bowman, 225, Tennessee; Rudy Stromberg, 223, Philadelphia, won from Ed Newman, 240, St. Louis, and Karl Pojello, 202, Lithuania, and Jim Casey, 210, Ireland, went 30 minutes to a draw.

Welterweight Champ Loses In Nationals

Cozey Storace Loses Bout to Mulligan; Hawaiians Advance

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 8.—The powerful left hooks that enabled Cozey Storace, of Rome, N. Y., to rule over the Nation's amateur welterweight boxers for a year failed him tonight when he clashed with Jimmy Mulligan, 18-year-old Lowell (Mass.) youngster, in a second-round trial bout at Boston Garden.

Mulligan, who has been competing but eight months, dethroned the only one of the eight 1939 National A. A. U. champions to enter the current tourneys by feeding him an effective mixture of left jabs and uppercuts.

Storace's crouching tactics so puzzled Sam Alascio, of Baltimore, his first-round opponent, that the latter was knocked out early in the first round.

Champ Off Balance

Mulligan, however, forced the champion to take an upright stance by uppercutting him and kept him off balance with left jabs, many of which forced openings for solid left smashes to the jaw.

After being gashed on the cheek by one of Storace's heavy left hooks late in the second round, Mulligan swapped punches with the defending titlist during all of the finale, and did so well that he was awarded a unanimous decision.

About 200 battlers from 27 States and Honolulu opened their quest for 1940 titles this afternoon. When the 112-pound class was reduced to the quarter finals, two members of the Honolulu team, Johnny Manalo and Dado Marino, were among the eight survivors for tomorrow's fisticuffing.

A third boxer from that distant isle, Lucas Pasion, a shifty 118-pounder with a paralyzing punch, loomed as the outstanding performer on the first day's program.

Wins Two by First

He needed only seconds to become one of the last eight survivors in his class, for he scored a first-round knockout over both Richard Baker, of Baltimore, and Buster Spataro, of Omaha, Nebr., in his two trial engagements.

Boxers from the middle and far west got off to flying starts at the expense of Eastern and Southern rivals, especially in the 135-pound class, which was paced by another Hawaiian, Paul Matsumoto.

Mike McCormick To Start for Reds

Roanoke, Va., April 8 (AP).—Appearance of Mike McCormick, rookie lefthander, in the line-up will be the only change in the Reds' batting order when they open the season next Tuesday in Cincinnati against Chicago, manager Bill McKechnie announced tonight.

Mike has been given the No. 7 position.

Harry Craft will take centerfield and if he slumps the position will be given to Vince DiMaggio.

Tied in their spring series, the Reds and Sox were rained out today. They meet at Bluefield, W. Va., tomorrow.

Carolina Bass Fishing Season Opens Auspiciously

Raleigh, N. C., April 8.—The angling season opened up with a bang in Carolina yesterday as a party of three hauled in 36 bass ranging in weight up to 58 pounds off Cape Hatteras.

Dr. Avner Barclay, Lieut. Eldridge, of the Coast Guard, and a Civilian Conservation Corps officer, the first anglers to arrive on the scene this year, formed the party. It was one of the biggest first catches in several years.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Greenville, S. C., April 8.—Clark Griffith ought to enshrine this little town. Twenty years ago it was from here that Griffith plucked the best hitter the Washington club ever owned—Goose Goslin. He bought him for a mere $6,000 and unknowingly came up with one of baseball's best bargains.

POVICH

No criminal is Goose Goslin, but if he ever comes back to Greenville he will be returning to the scene of his former crimes—because as a Sally Leaguer back in his formative days he murdered the art of playing the outfield. Greenville citizens still bellow at the stories of Goslin charging in for line drives hit far over his head, or running back for balls he could have caught by standing in his tracks.

He was the worst outfielder in the league—and the best hitter. The Nats bought him for his hitting and took a chance on his outfielding. For two seasons in the big leagues, it was a battle between Goslin's cranium and the fences and then Goslin won—his head was hardest. Meanwhile, he learned how to catch a fly ball.

When Griffith scans his current light-hitting batting order, he has reason to yearn for another Goslin. Never before, never since, have the Nats owned a slugger who could break up a ball game with the same frequency, the same eclat as the hard-swinging Salemite, who always considered the pitcher in a hole from the moment he took his place at bat.

American League Umpire Bill McGowan launched Goslin on his baseball career. He found the Goose, a big-boned kid of 17, running an elevator in a Dupont plant near Wilmington, N. J., and trying to pitch for the company team on the side. McGowan didn't like Goslin's pitching, but he liked the lad's batting stroke.

"I told him I could get him a job with a friend of mine who ran the Greenville club," relates McGowan, "and Goslin was all excited. 'But,' I told Goose, 'I've told them you're an outfielder, not a pitcher, so forget about pitching.' Goose wanted to know how to go about getting to Greenville.

"I knew he had never been on a train in his life, so I gave him full instructions. I told him to walk up to the ticket seller in the railroad station and ask for a ticket to Greenville, S. C., on he next train. I warned him not to get off the train until it reached Greenville. 'Then what do I do?' Goose asked.

"'Well,' I said, 'when you get off the train at Greenville, find a taxicab and tell the man you want to go to the ball players' hotel. Walk inside and you'll find a man behind a counter. He's the clerk. Tell him you're a ball player who has come to join the Greenville team and he'll give you a room. Understand?"

"'Yes,' said Goslin, 'but what does that clerk look like?'"

The Goose was this department's favorite ball player. He had a forgiveable ego. Nobody ever accused him of being quite bright as a baseball man but actually he thought he was managerial timber. When Joe Cronin was appointed manager of the Nats in 1933, it was a blow to the Goose. Goslin visioned himself as the manager of the Washington club, thus constituting a minority of one.

When Steve O'Neill was fired as manager of Cleveland, the Goose blandly applied for the job. When Mickey Cochrane was through at Detroit, Goslin thought he might be the next Detroit manager. He was a free agent at the time and wouldn't sign a contract as an outfielder with Washington until Del Baker got the Detroit job permanently. The Goose was downcast despite the fact that the only person who thought he was in line for the job was himself.

For 14 years Goslin was almost the only colorful character on Washington teams. He knocked home runs and struck out with equal gusto. He tried to steal more occupied bases than any player in the league and when caught in the foolhardy attempt would dismiss it lightly by saying, "Well, I had a great lead on the pitcher."

We'll never forget that day in Boston when the Goose slugged out five hits, including two home runs. His second homer was something to see. It was a vicious line drive hit with all the power in his big frame and it traveled full into the centerfield bleachers where no ball had been hit for a decade. Goslin never hit a longer ball in his life.

That evening in the hotel the athletes were discussing that terrific clout by the Goose when Goslin walked by. "We were just talking about that second homer, Goose," said Joe Judge, "that was a nice clout."

"Yeah," said Goslin, "it was all right, but I wish I had really got a-hold of that ball."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 8.—Reeling around the sports world:

BASEBALL:

Our pal, George Kirksey, comes out in Look today to bury the Yankees, not to praise them. He says that at long last they have come to the end of their reign. The Red Sox, George believes, will unseat them on the strength of "punch, spirit and a pitching staff revived by . . . Herb Hash and Bill Butland," two young right-handers who did well for Minneapolis last season.

CONSIDINE

George binds it all up with "flaming youth," and will-to-win, but what we think he overlooks is that the Yanks are a younger team than the Sox, in fact one of the youngest teams in baseball. They have more than a will-to-win, too. Their overpowering competitive surges are cold, unhurried, and come at the right times. They beat a hot-handed Red Sox team by 17 games last season. After the Sox had beaten them five straight in midseason to shave their lead to something like six games. But the Yanks pulled serenely away, like a grayhound opening distance between himself and a fireplug. The same thing happened the year before when the Indians threatened them in midseason.

In handing out palms to clubs which improved themselves this year, one can't overlook the Yanks. They, too, have a crop of young pitchers who were minor league stars and who should do well pitching for the greatest defensive and offensive club in the game.

We'd like to see the Red Sox win the pennant, because it would make a better story to write than repeating the old accolades about the Yanks. We'd like to see the Sox win, and meet the Brooklyn Dodgers in the World Series. We wish we could come out now and pick those two clubs, but it would be sheer wishful thinking. Like our pal George's interesting obituary on the Yanks.

GOLF:

Behind the scenes at Augusta, in the Masters' Tournament, was a feverish competition that never got mentioned in the sport pages. It was the struggle of the manufacturers to get a winner. Golf pros are divided into tight little subsidized camps. The Spalding men are out to beat the Wilson men, who are out to beat the Dunlop boys, who are out to beat the McGregors, and so on. It is sometimes more exciting than the tournament itself, just as baseball's All-Star game became a few years ago when it almost was more of a red-blooded contest between the Wheaties and the Huskies than it was a battle between the American and National leagues.

Representatives of the golf manufacturers fill the bars at the big golf tournaments, their pockets stuffed with bonus checks for their proselyted men—provided the guys win. Last year at the Open there was a $3,000 manufacturer's bonus check waiting for Craig Wood if he could have won the tournament, whose top prize is only $1,000.

RACING:

There has been a swing in the past week away from Bimelech and toward the new wonder-horse of the Pacific Coast, the gigantic young Mioland. The miserable winter in Kentucky kept Bimelech indoors much of the time. He is weeks behind in his training. Mioland, son of a German sire and an Italian dam, has been working most of the winter on the Coast. He is owned by the fabulously successful Charles S. Howard, and trained by glum, grumpy, extremely competent Tom Smith.

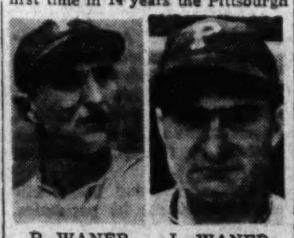
Smith plans to keep the big striding colt on the coast for another week before taking him to Churchill Downs. Smith, who turned Seabiscuit into a great champion, likes Mioland's chances. You will, too, when you learn that he can apparently run all day; gained his first victory as a 2-year-old in a mile race in 1:38, and in the San Capistrano Handicap who thundered home far in front, beating the horses who had beaten him in the Santa Anita Derby.

Bimelech won the Pimlico Futurity in 1:45 1-5, wonderful time. Mioland quietly won the San Juan in the same time. During the Pimlico Futurity Bimelech ran the first three quarters in 1:13 1-5, driving. Mioland did it in 1:11, and thereafter was checked down by his jockey. Howard bought Mioland from State Senator H. W. Ray, of Oregon, for $15,000 twice as much as he paid for Seabiscuit. The colt was bred in Oregon, and if he wins it will be the blow of blows to those who wax sentimental over the wondrous properties of Kentucky as a thoroughbred-breeding center.

The Waners Will Miss First Game

By the Associated Press

Wichita, Kans., April 8.—For the first time in 14 years the Pittsburgh



P. WANER L. WANER

Pirates seem likely today to take the field in the opening game of the National League season next week without the Waner brothers in the starting line-up.

Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pirates recuperating from an infected throat here while his team took another off day at Hutchinson, Kans., because of bad weather, disclosed his plans for the first game against St. Louis do not include the Waners as starters.

Instead, he said he would use Debs Garms in Paul Waner's accustomed spot in rightfield if the Cardinals use a right-hand pitcher, and Maurice Van Robays in right if a southpaw is used. Johnny Rizzo will play left and Bob Elliott center.

Paul Waner is the only active player with three major league batting crowns to his credit, having won the National League titles in 1927, 1934 and 1936. He needs one more hits to make 2,800, his total being by far the most of any player in the National League. Brother Lloyd is second in the number of hits made in the league, with 2,263 for 13 years. Honus Wagner holds the all-time league record of 3,430 hits.

Dizzy Dean in Rare Form in Debut as Cubs Beat Browns

Star Blanks Browns for Five Innings

Talkative One Allows But Two Hits, Cubs Win, 15-2; York Hits Fifth Home Run

By the Associated Press

Fort Smith, Ark., April 8.—Dizzy Dean, making his 1940 mound debut just 50 miles from the Arkansas town where he was born, hit the comeback trail today in sparkling fashion.

The eccentric Chicago right-hander, whose pitching career has been on the wane, went five innings against the St. Louis Browns, limiting them to two hits and no runs.

While Dizzy was pitching shut-out ball his teammates built up a 10-0 lead and went on to give the Cubs a 15-to-0 victory.

Wild in First

Dean walked two men in the first inning, but neither advanced further than second base. Sam Harshany gleaned a single off Dizzy in the second frame, but died on first base. The Browns threatened in the third term when George McQuinn walked with two out. Joe Gallagher singled, sending McQuinn to third, but Harlond Clift struck out to end the inning.

The Browns went out in order in the fourth. Dean issued a walk to Joe Grace to start the fifth, then retired the next three batters on two infield pop-ups and an outfield fly.

Mooty Follows Up

Jake Mooty took over in the sixth and gave up three hits and two runs the rest of the way. Meanwhile, the Cubs were slaughtering all offerings.

Hank Leiber accounted for three runs in the first inning with a home run. Dominic d'Allessandro homered in the fourth, scoring Leiber ahead of him, and Dean followed later with a double to score Bob Sturgeon, who had singled. Al Todd drove in four more runs in the fifth with a circuit smash with the bases full.

The Dodgers fell upon Spud Chandler for seven runs in the second inning, then collected three more in the seventh on homers by Babe Phelps and Pee Wee Reese off Steve Sundra. War or No War, Washington Cricket Club Is Prepared for One of Busiest Seasons

Here's Manager Harold Bennett, of the Washington Cricket Club, showing what the well-dressed cricketer wears when he steps up to the plate—pardon us, we mean the wicket. Note rubber gloves and shin guards to protect the batter from the bowler's bouncing offerings. The club opens its season May 5 at Langley Park, Md.

First Match Scheduled With All-Star Team May 5 at Langley Field; McCormick-Goodhart Newly Elected President of 50-Year-Old Club

By Al Hailey

Get out your horse, Paul, here come the British again.

This time, however, it's not a regiment, it's just the Washington Cricket Club coming out with plans for another season of England's national game.

War or no war, the stout-hearted band of Americanized Englishmen is going to carry on—in fact, they're getting ready to open one of their busiest seasons in years.

The ranks of cricketers in the United States are pretty much shot by England's war with Germany, but the Washington club yesterday announced plans for a schedule of 25 games.

A team of all-stars from the three Philadelphia cricket clubs will be the Washington club's first opponent May 5 at the Langley Park, Md., estate of L. McCormick-Goodhart, commercial secretary at the British embassy, and newly elected president of the club.

No Vice Presidents

Although almost all of the Washington cricketers are now American citizens, England's troubles abroad have had obvious effect upon the local club.

This year, the Capital's cricket club will operate without vice presidents. Election of officers was held this week, but no vice presidents were elected.

"We thought it best to leave that off this year," Alfred Wynne, who came to America from England in 1889, explained. Last year high officials at the embassy served as vice presidents.

"There being several new additions to the British Embassy staff, we expect to have a strong club this year," Wynne, new secretary and treasurer, explained. "But most of the men at the embassy will have to keep close to their desks."

Played Exeter Crew

Wynne said that quite a few of the men who played against the Washington club last year have been called to the colors abroad, but that none of the local members has been affected.

At least one team the Washington cricketers played last year is definitely off the schedule—the club from the Exeter, one of the British fighting ships which ran the German pocket battleship Graf Spee to its doom just outside the Montevideo Harbor.

The Exeter was damaged in the battle with the Spee and one of the officers who played last spring against the Washington club at Langley Park was killed in the fighting. The Exeter was lying in Baltimore Harbor when its club came here.

All Comers Invited

The Washington Cricket Club has a long and colorful history in Washington—although it was not until last year that this fact became publicly known. For more than 50 years the club has flourished, and this year, for the first time, a call is being issued for players.

Anyone interested in cricket is invited to call Wynne or Manager Harold Bennett at Dupont 8043.

These persons should bear in mind, however, that a ripping good game of cricket goes on for three days, the score ending this way: Visitors, 496; Locals, 334. Also prospective members should cultivate a taste for tea and crumpets, served at all the games.

The bowling, or pitching, will be handled by Blackwell Castle and Harry Ainsworth this year. Last year the Washington club played 23 games, won 11, lost 11 and tied 1.

George Larsen has been elected captain for the 1940 season. Only other officers are McCormick-Goodhart, Wynne and Bennett.

Yanks, Griffs To Pay Tribute To Col. Ruppert

New York's Opener April 19 Will Feature Unveiling of Plaque

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—The world champion Yankees will pay tribute to their late owner, Col. Jacob Ruppert, when they start the 1940 home season with the Washington Senators at Yankee Stadium April 19.

A memorial plaque will be unveiled on the centerfield bleacher fence to perpetuate the memory of Col. Ruppert, who owned the club 24 years until his death last year.

Will Harridge, president of the American League, will come from Chicago to take part in the ceremonies. The plaque will bear an inscription which begins with the words:

"Gentleman, sportsman and American."

This will be the second plaque at Yankee Stadium. The first is near the centerfield flagpole honoring little Miller Huggins, who won six American League pennants and three world's championships as Yankee manager. Huggins died in 1929.

Great Britain Out Of Walker Cup Because of War

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—England's golfing officials notified the United States Golf Association today that because of "the present emergency" Great Britain would not send a team to oppose the Americans for the Walker Cup matches this year.

"With profound regret," the cable from Henry Gullen, secretary of St. Andrews' Royal and Ancient Club, said, "have to inform you that owing to present emergency the Royal and Ancient Club cannot send team to compete for Walker Cup this year."

This year's international matches between the amateur teams had tentatively been scheduled for the Town and Country Club, St. Paul, August 30 and 31.

The Walker Cup was last competed for in June, 1938, at St. Andrews. The British team defeated the Americans on that occasion, 7 matches to 4.

Mrs. Bosley Signed By Lewis Stables

Famous Woman Trainer From Maryland Takes Over Strong String

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—Mrs. John Bosley, the Maryland society matron who has been keeping the wolf off the welcome mat for half a dozen years by developing horses, hit the big time among turf trainers today.

She was engaged to handle the horses of Mrs. E. Graham Lewis, the Elizabeth Arden of the cosmetic world, taking the place from which Lou Feustel resigns to return to Samuel D. Riddle's Man o' War Stable.

Thus the former Elizabeth Cromwell, taking over one of the major racing strings in the turf world, advances to a spot higher than any woman trainer has ever reached before. In Mrs. Lewis' barns she has a promising string of thoroughbreds of all ages, including the Kentucky Derby candidates Jacomar, Perfect Love, Samuel D. and General Manager.

Horatio Alger Story

Mrs. Bosley has ranked high among developers of racing stock ever since she brought Chase Me to the races from the Bosley's Fox Hill Farm at Monckton, Md., in 1933 and won $30,000 with that one-time hunter that year. Since then she has had others of her own horses and has developed some for Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. John and A. C.

In becoming trainer for Mrs. Lewis' extensive string, she climaxes a career that reads like one of Horatio Alger's success stories.

Washington Lacrossemen Meet Hopkins

Locals to Invade Baltimore for Match Tomorrow

The Washington A. A. lacrosse team will seek its second straight victory of the season tomorrow night, meeting Johns Hopkins at Baltimore in what is expected to be its stiffest test of the season.

Hopkins, boasting one of the strongest teams in its history, is favored to win the national intercollegiate championship. Last week the Johnnies upset Baltimore A. C., 12 to 2.

Washington opened its season with a 6-to-2 victory over Swarthmore in which it used no plays, saving the tricky plays for Hopkins. Coaches Joe Deckman and "Riverdale" Smith had the team out every day last week in intensive practice and much improvement was noted.

The Hopkins match is in the nature of a warm-up for Washington's home opener against Baltimore A. C. Saturday.

Fred Perry Loses Final Match, but Wins Tournament

Los Angeles, April 8 (AP).—Lester Stoefen, of Palm Springs, defeated Fred Perry in the final matches of the round robin West Coast professional tennis championship today, but it mattered little because the English star had already won the tournament.

Outlasting Perry in a hard-fought encounter, Stoefen won, 11—9, 4—6, 6—1. It was Perry's only loss in the tournament. He cinched the title yesterday.

J. Donald Budge wound up his play by winning from Ben Gorchakoff, 6—1, 6—4. Gorchakoff substituted for Keith Gledhill, who withdrew yesterday because of illness.

Jackie Hayes, Chicago White Sox second baseman, has his wife to comfort him in Michael Reese Hospital, but he has anything but a rosy outlook. Hayes is undergoing treatment for an eye infection which developed while traveling with the Sox east from California

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—Jackie Hayes, Chicago White Sox regular second baseman, is a sad and puzzled man these days.

Hayes is taking fever treatments in an effort to clear up an inflamed eye which forced him to the bench during the club's spring exhibition games.

"Specialists don't seem to know what's wrong with me," said Hayes. "I'm worried more about the eye than about baseball. I can hardly see and its getting no better."

Hayes reported to the club in splendid condition this spring, apparently completely recovered from an old knee injury. He appeared ready for a big year when the eye ailment cut him down.

Mrs. Bosley Named Trainer for Lewis

Back in '33 she found herself with a mortgage on Fox Hill and three children to rear. She knew horses best—so she turned to the races. Several hunters were in the stables at Fox Hill, one of them Chase Me, a pet of the children. The whole family got together and trained this brown son of Purchase for the races. He swept through the Maryland season that year with six straight victories.

Stuck to Racing

Along came an offer for the whole family and the horse to go to Hollywood to make a picture, but the Bosleys voted to keep racing. In his very next start—the Suburban Handicap at Belmont in 1934—Chase Me broke a leg and had to be destroyed. The next successful Bosley hope was Betty's Buddy, which also won about $30,000. The family was offered $50,000 for this one and turned the bid down, only to see the horse go bad shortly afterward.

Last year, Mrs. Bosley saddled 22 winners and won $24,337. Her husband has been an owner and trainer of steeplechase horses for years. Her son, John, jr., also is a trainer, as well as a gentleman jockey.

Feustel, who is linked closely with the name of Man o' War on the American turf, returns to the stable for which he developed and raced "Big Red" two decades ago. There he will find any number of offspring of the big fellow he loved so well.

First Baseman Young to Rejoin Giants Wednesday

Anderson, S. C., April 8.—Rained out of their exhibition game against Cleveland here today, the New York Giants heard that Norman (Babe) Young will rejoin the club at Tarboro, N. C., Wednesday and add a little more to Manager Bill Terry's perplexity about the first base situation.

Young, counted upon to be the regular first sacker this year, has missed 11 games because of marital difficulties which required his presence at Richmond, Va. Meanwhile, Johnny McCarthy has been hitting hard and Zeke Bonura has done well on the few occasions he was called upon.

In their own half of the inning the Nats busied themselves again and pried two runs out of Dick Coffman. Swift's successor, after Giuliani singled, Welaj pinch hit for Torres and delivered a double to center that tied the score. Case moved Welaj to third by beating out another infield hit and Walker moved Welaj home with a long fly to left.

That activity restored the Nats to a 12-11 lead and in the seventh they made it 13-11 on Bloodworth's single, a wild throw by Cuccinnelo and a single by Case. In the eighth Miller and Hassot singled to narrow the Nats' margin to 13-12, but Sammy West got that run back after leading off the Nats' half of the inning with a two-bagger to right. Cecil Travis singled to score him.

Izzy Jannazzo 8-5 Favorite Over Mamakos

10-Rounder Features Opening Bouts at Riverside Tomorrow

Riverside Stadium, Washington's nearest approach to New York's Madison Square Garden, will be the scene of the Capital's newest boxing venture tomorrow night, when Steve Mamakos, tenth ranking welterweight, steps up for a ten-round fight with Izzy Jannazzo, New York Italian contender for Henry Armstrong's welterweight championship.

For Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin's inaugural fight show, Jimmy Lake, the well-known "Carnation Kid," will be at the microphone to introduce ringside celebrities. Erwin assures that a large sprinkling of Congressmen, Senators and persons of national and local importance will be on hand to watch the goings-on.

Jannazzo, who has been promised the cooperation of the New York State Athletic Commission in lining up an Armstrong battle, last appeared here in 1936, when he won a ten-round decision over Phil Furr.

The same year, he dropped a close 15-round decision to Barney Ross in a fight for the world's championship and fought Ceferino Garcia to a 15-round draw. He has maintained his high spot in the welterweight rankings since then.

Jannazzo Favored.

The New Yorker will be about an 8-to-5 favorite to give Mamakos a thorough going-over tomorrow night. He fought a 10-round draw with Holman Williams early this year and three weeks ago was the victim of what the fight boys call a "home-town decision" to Williams.

Williams, second-ranking welter, gave Mamakos a bad beating in Baltimore.

"We know we are in for a hard, driving fight with one of the toughest fighters since Harry Greb in Mamakos, but we don't think we'll have much trouble," Guy Anselmi, manager of Jannazzo, said.

Mamakos a Crowd Pleaser

Anselmi said he plans to seek National Boxing Association help in getting an Armstrong fight in a visit to President Heinie Miller's office this morning.

Because of his style of never ceasing to throw punches, Mamakos is a sure bet to make a crowd-pleasing battle. He hasn't been seen here in a year and since has come up in the welterweight world by twice defeating Canadian Champion Sammy Luftspring. He also boasts a decision over Cal Cagni, who recently upset the welterweight rankings by knocking off Milt Aron, No. 1 man.

In the eight-round semifinal tomorrow, Sammy Magro, Birmingham, Ala., knockout specialist, makes his local debut against Washington's El Brookman. Three four-rounders bring out Manuel Ross, Baltimore, against Pedro Cisco, Los Angeles; Joe Mussolini, Baltimore, against Bob Watkins, Des Moines, and Phillip Ensenga again Dutch Arndt.

COX TO SPEAK

Wiffy Cox, Congressional professional, will be guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Washington Sales Representatives Association today at the Lafayette Hotel. Wiffy's topic will be "The Art of Following Through." Ed Crone, president of the association, will act as master of ceremonies.

WOMEN BOWLERS

A doubles sweepstakes and election of officers will conclude the season's schedule of the Women's Country Club Bowling League today at Silver Spring Bowling Alleys. An entire new slate of officers will be elected at the meeting of present officers and team captains at 9:30 a. m.

KENWOOD

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood professional, will hold an invitation pro-amateur next Monday, April 15. Play will be from scratch with each pro allowed three amateur partners. The course will be open all day for the tournament players.

ARMY AND NAVY

Allan Burton reported the first eagle of the season at Army and Navy, a three on the long par five sixteenth by A. B. Prossie. He used a driver, brassie and one putt.

Trojan A.C., Treasury Beaten in Recreation Department Play-Offs

United Typewriters and Trinity M. E. gained the semifinals of the Recreation Department basketball playoffs last night with victories over Trojan A. C., 40-18, and Treasury, 57-23, respectively.

Both games started off in a wary manner, but soon opened up and developed into fast exhibitions. Quantrille, of Trinity, and Tipton, of Typewriters, were top scorers, with 12 and 14 points respectively.

The semifinals of the city-wide tournament will be played at Tech High gym tomorrow night, Celtics, Hine division champion, meeting Jewish Community Center at 8 o'clock, and Trinity M. E. clashing with United Typewriters at 9 o'clock.

Davey Day's Wife Seeks Divorce

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 8.—Mrs. Marion Sylvia Day, wife of Davey Day, No. 1 challenger for the lightweight boxing championship, filed suit for separate maintenance against the pugilist in Superior Court today, charging him with beating her on numerous occasions following their marriage November 13, 1939. They separated on April 4.

Mrs. Day asked no specific amount in her suit. She obtained a writ of restraining Day from leaving the State, but he will be able to meet Sammy Angott at Louisville, May 3, by posting a $5,000 bond guaranteeing his return.

Bobo Knocked Out In Slugging Bout

Pittsburgh, April 8 (AP).—After one of the wildest fighting scenes Pittsburgh fans have witnessed in years, Harry Bobo, Pittsburgh Negro heavyweight, suffered a technical knockout tonight between the sixth and seventh rounds of a 10-round bout with Bill Boyd, of New York, Jack Dempsey's protege. His left hand was broken.

Bobo, weighing 207½, and a 21¾-pound weight advantage over Boyd. The two fought toe to toe during the early stages of the contest, but in the fifth Boyd caught his opponent with a terrific right to the jaw, toppling him over the top strand of ropes and into the aisle.

Bobo couldn't return before the count of 10, but the bell sounded at "eight" saving him. He weathered the sixth, but was unable to answer the bell at the seventh.

Redskins Acquire Coast Star, A Triple-Threat From San Jose

Zimmerman Figures to Fit in With Offense Of Washington Eleven

A 195-pound shifty runner and a crack passer and kicker, this 21-year-old youth from Arcadia, Calif., figures heavily in the Redskins' offensive plans for next season because of his triple-threat talents.

Described as a passer to compare favorably with Sammy Baugh and a punter who averaged better than 40 yards per boot last season, Zimmerman also is adept at blocking.

He starred for three years with San Jose State and was a prime factor in the school's remarkable record of 33 victories, three losses and one tie during that period. Last season San Jose was undefeated and untied in 13 games.

An outstanding player from the time he entered school, Zimmerman enjoyed his best season last year, to which a string of honors attest. He was selected on the Associated Press Little All-America on the All-Coast teams chosen by Collier's and the San Francisco News.

Not the bone-crushing type of fullback but rather a runner who relies chiefly on speed and elusiveness, Zimmerman gained 505 yards from scrimmage last season for an average of more than 7 yards a try. For passing he had a mark of 34 completions in 82 throws for a completion percentage of better than 40. As a sophomore Zimmerman completed more than 50 per cent of his aerials.

Zimmerman is the sixteenth Redskin in the fold and the sixth rookie signed. He was fifth on the Redskins' draft list.

Charlotte Hall Nine Begins Season Today

Gaithersburg High To Be Foe; Game With Briarley Postponed

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., April 8.—Rained out of its opening game with the Briarley Military Academy at Ammendale, Md., today, the Charlotte Hall Military Academy prepared to pry the lid off the season against Gaithersburg High School here tomorrow afternoon.

Today's postponement was a real break for the Cadets, for it means that Coaches M. D. Burgee and Shel Ehringer will be able to use Elliot (Lefty) Dent on the mound against Gaithersburg tomorrow, then pitch him against Devitt Prep in Washington on Friday afternoon. The caoches want to use Dent as much as possible early in the season, for he is the only veteran flinger on the club and the rest of the tossers need more polishing before being sent to the hill.

Charlotte Hall defeated Gaithersburg twice last year, and Burgee and Ehringer are hoping that tomorrow's game will not be too close. They want to have the team in prime shape for its Washington battle with Devitt on Friday, Devitt having plastered a whipping on the Cadets last season.

Grocery Clerk Thrills Crowd In ABC Bowling

Uncorks String of Strikes and Winds Up in Fifth Place

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 8.—Charles Neeb, 38-year-old Columbus, Ohio, grocery clerk, gave American Bowling Congress spectators a thrill when he started clustering strikes in the midst of a dull minor events session and wound up in fifth place in all events with 1,901.

With a 689 start in the five-man event, Neeb rolling in his sixth A. B. C., had strike runs that gave him 235 and 251 in a 658 series in the doubles. With 1,347 starting the singles, the best start anyone has had toward an all-events total, fans were visioning Neeb as the first Columbus bowler to take an all-events crown.

The pressure became too much for Neeb. He kept getting strikes but too-frequent misses cut him down to 554 in the singles and he had to be satisfied with fifth place.

body for his trouble. He came back, however, to rock the Mexican with a looping left and right to the head that echoed all over the arena and brought howls of appreciation from the scant house.

Carl won the first three rounds, tired midway of the battle but came back to raise a nasty-looking mouse under Silva's right eye and keep him away with long-range lefts to the jaw.

Although the rain kept the fans away, the few who were there—only slightly more than 500 were paying guests—kept the house in an uproar as Silva poured in to take almost ceaseless punishment while driving for Guggino's body. Guggino went down in the fourth round when he slipped as Silva landed a right to the jaw.

Bullock Beats Sarullo

Billy Bullock, 137½, of Washington, pulled a surprise upset out of the bag to take the decision in the six-round semifinal over Philadelphia's Tony Sarullo, 135¾.

Bullock's two-handed attack was too fierce for the Philadelphian. There was no knockdowns, although Billy, in his enthusiasm, hit the floor after missing a wild swing intended for Sarullo's chin.

After a wild six-round slugfest that saw both boys do everything but clamp a "cobra clutch" on each other, Jimmy Burns, 156, of Johnstown, Pa., was awarded a split decision over Washington's Art Lind, 150. Both fighters were bleeding from the nose at the end.

Sammy Williams, 161, took a unanimous decision over Floyd Grayson, 160, both Washington colored fighters, in the night's first six-rounder. Floyd backpedaled all the way, pausing only when he backed into the ropes.

After stabbing the face of Domonick Ricco, 136, of Fort Myer, into a bloody smear with a left hand, Elwood Harris, 137, of Richmond, was knocked skittering across the ring by a looping right to the jaw, but came back to outslug the soldier and take a unanimous decision in the opening four-rounder.

Rookie Pitcher Pete Mitchell is expected to be optioned to Wilmington of the Interstate League.

Bimelech's Stock Still Soars; Becomes Triple-Crown Choice

Col. Bradley's Derby Hope In Fine Shape

Unique Challenge At Pimlico Last Fall Made at Stall By Old Turfman

Baltimore, Md., April —Sunday morning, November 5, 1939, was a gloomy, dull and rainy day around the old Pimlico Race Course in Baltimore. Sports fans and otherwise were lazing in bed or sipping hot coffee and munching warm toast by their firesides while reading of the magnificent victory of Bimelech in the Pimlico Futurity the afternoon before.

The biblically named Bradley thoroughbred had just completed a whirlwind juvenile career; six smashing triumphs in as many starts. He had won $135,090 for his owner and in only one race had he ever been less than a length and a half from his nearest rival. That was in the Hopeful Stakes at Saratoga when he broke to a poor start and amazed even veteran horsemen by the manner in which he made up lost ground and time.

That Sunday at Pimlico the usual crowd of admirers which flocks to a champion was not in evidence around barn "I" on the backstretch. Trainer Bill Hurley and his stable watchman sat around the oil stove in the bunkroom at the end of the barn.

"I just telephoned the hotel," said Hurley, "and the colonel is on his way out here. He'll tell you what to say in that challenge."

The trainer was referring to Col. Bradley's statement that he would issue a challenge to meet any horse in America with his Bimelech. What made the situation significant was that only five days earlier Challedon had earned the "Horse-of-the-Year" title by defeating Kayak II and Cravat in the Pimlico Special. Was this a defy to those three?

"Make It Broad"

A limousine pulled up alongside the stable and a nurse and secretary alighted to assist an aging man from the car to the drafty bunk room. Shrugging aside the proffered help, he walked over to Bimelech's stall to reassure himself of his star's good health.

Later in the bunk room his secretary sat with poised pencil ready to jot down the terms of the challenge.

"Just write it out and make it as broad as possible," announced the colonel.

A bald and bold statement, but from the colonel highly significant of the great esteem in which he held Bimelech. Rare in the annals of thoroughbred racing for a challenge to meet any horse, regardless of age, with a 2-year-old that only once had raced over a distance of 1 mile.

Money was not a consideration nor a factor. The terms read: "To race for anything from $10 up to be added by the Racing Association with side bets optional."

No, Col. Bradley had thoroughbreds that won the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, the Belmont Stakes and all the great events of the American turf and he was confident now he had in Bimelech one of the greatest racing machines seen in years.

Challenge Causes Stir

The challenge was released for publication and caused a stir throughout the racing world. Match a 2-year-old against a 3 or 4-year-old! Few sportsmen other than Col. Bradley would have had the temerity to issue such a defy but the gentleman from Kentucky knew his horses.

There were no takers and Bimelech rose higher than ever in the estimation of racing fans. He was to be future-book favorite for the Derby; more than that he was to be the first horse in years, perhaps in history, to be publicly acknowledged as a future-book favorite for the triple-crown—the Derby-Preakness-Belmont.

Almost five months have rolled past since that rainy Sunday morning on the old Pimlico backstretch. Bimelech has rested well on his owner's farm in Kentucky. They say he has put on weight, grown, and all the other things which a good animal should do in adolescence.

Come May and the Preakness at old Pimlico and he will not need to have grown for his admirers and well-wishers in Maryland. Col. Bradley gave him full stature last November on a rainy Sunday morning in a drafty bunk room with an oil stove to take the chill out of the air.

Derby Favorite

Bimelech, Col. E. R. Bradley's Kentucky Derby hope this year, is well backed by the veteran horseman, Henry McDaniel. He says the Bradley star has "Derby blood" and that only three other candidates have a chance to beat him in the Blue Grass classic

Bill Ackerman: Fishermen Urge Waterway Improvements

There is considerable agitation by Ocean City boatmen and Coast Guardsmen for the improvement of the inlets jetties before the season of 1940 gets under way, because several visiting sportfishermen narrowly escaped trouble on the sunken ends last year.

ACKERMAN

An inlet in first class shape is almost mandatory if the community is to live up to its name of the "greatest white marlin fishing port on the Atlantic coast." Last season there were from a dozen to 30 or more visiting boats every day throughout the marlin run. This year the number should be doubled. There will be many new charter boatmen also, mostly from Palm Beach and Miami, and many captains well-known to local anglers will be missing for they have been gobbled up by visitors with private boats who recognize their merit and ability.

Capt. Ches Gray, who tagged and released more than two score of the big fish last year, and was top boat for the season, will be "private" this season. Harry Bunting, whose "lure" was high boat for many days, this year will captain the Thirty-eight Matthews of the C. L. Parkers, a local couple who have gone for this fishing in a big way.

The phenomenal fishing of the Parkers and the ability of Capt. Harry Bunting to find and get the fish to strike is going to make a combination hard to beat. We look to see them close to the top in marlin caught and released.

Reports from the South and Middle West indicate the severe cold and snow resulted in a considerable loss in the quail population. The same is true in many other sections of the country, yet southern Maryland native quail stood the hard winter well.

That is probably because it is the home of such sportsman as Fred Ransdall, who just released another 200 bob white this past week. This is the second batch he has liberated during the past two years.

Anglers fishing the Atlantic coastal waters for blue marlin and giant bluefin tuna will compete again this year for the honor of having their names on the two permanent trophies of the Catalina Tuna Club.

In 1939, the first year of competition for these trophies, the blue marlin award went to Mrs. Mary Sears, of Boston, for her catch of the world record 730-pound blue taken last May off Cat Cay in the Bahamas. Joseph D. Peeler, Los Angeles angler and member of the Tuna Club, came east to fish Nova Scotia waters and won the award with a 705-pounder taken at Wedgeport on Tom Gifford's Viola, the 16-ounce Tycoon rod that is in a fair way to beat the wonderful record of Betsey.

In order to qualify, the fishing must be accomplished with Tuna Club specification tackle—16-ounce tip and 24-thread line. This is a line and rod the ladies brought to the forefront, with a half-dozen outstanding catches during 1938-39, and which the men have taken to in self-defense.

While the new international specifications have two larger line sizes, we believe the greatest number of outstanding catches from now on will be made on this size tackle.

A.A.U. Gives Prize To Baltimorean For Mat Career

Ames, Iowa, April 8 (AP).—John V. K. Eareckson, 41, of Baltimore has been presented a silver cup by National A. A. U. Wrestling Meet officials honoring his competition in 25 national amateur wrestling championships—a record unique in the sport.

Eareckson, a member of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. wrestling team since 1920, has wrestled in 16 National A. A. U. meets, winning the championship twice; one National Olympic trial; and eight National Y. M. C. A. meets, winning four times.

He has also bagged the South Atlantic (A. A. U.) crown 17 times.

Mack Yearns For Hurler Like Grove, Walberg

Athletics' Boss Says 1 Good Moundsman Makes Big Difference

By the Associated Press

Memphis, Tenn., April 8 (AP).—The Athletics were taking batting practice today and Connie Mack was sitting and peering into the future.

"One pitcher like Bob Feller or Red Ruffing can make the difference in a second and first division ball club, the septugenarian reflected.

"Or like Bob Grove, Rube Walberg and George Earnshaw," he said, referring to the three great pitchers who enabled the Athletics to win pennants in 1929, 1930 and 1931, and two World Series, with a loss of only three games.

"It is too much to expect three such pitchers on one club at the same time again," said Mack. "My goodness. Just give me one man like any of the three and you would find a big difference in my club.

"A pitcher like Grove or Walberg or Earnshaw, in their prime, gives a club a lift. Such a man relieves tension on a pitching staff and makes things easier when the others take their turns. An ace pitcher like Grove usually takes the tough games in stride and leaves easier spots for his hurling mates. He also inspires the rest of the club."

Milwaukee, April (AP).—The Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association announced tonight the conditional sale of Les Willis, chunky left-handed pitcher, to Memphis of the Southern Association.

Memphis will have 30 days in which to decide whether to retain him. Willis won half a dozen games for Milwaukee last year after being signed as a free agent. He previously was with Louisville.

Gentlemen:

We submit herewith a detailed report of the mileage tests conducted on "Nu-Blue Sunoco" in comparison with fourteen premium-priced gasolines. All gasolines for test were purchased by us at regular retail service stations in Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

These tests were made under similar conditions of lead at engine speeds corresponding to 30, 50 and 70 miles per hour. The average miles per gallon obtained for "Nu-Blue Sunoco" at these three speeds and loads was not exceeded by any of the premium-priced gasolines tested.

As verified by the attached report, test conditions were such that all gasolines were handled and tested impartially.

Careful Dinah Captures Feature at Bowie, Paying $2.60

Blablah, Her Sister, Also Winner

2 Score Victories By 4 Lengths on Sloppy Track; Daily Double Pays $41.90

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 8.—Two smart girl horses, full sisters, stole the show at this Prince Georges County track this rainy afternoon. These daughters of Economic and Mint Dinah were Blahblah, aged 4, and Careful Dinah, aged 3, and they turned in identical victories, each winning by margins of four lengths.

Blahblah, in the colors of O. S. Jennings and ridden by Jockey Charlie Durando, tied rings around her field in the second race in the role of a $3.70 favorite. Careful Dinah, owned by J. H. Louchheim and piloted by Jockey Hilton Dawson, laughed at her opposition in the fourth race in the role of a $2.60 favorite.

The Gals showed a liking for the track. Blahblah was clocked in 1:14 1-5 for the 6 furlongs and Careful Dinah ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:07 2-5. The former put the finishing touches on a $41.90 payoff in the daily double.

Track Deep and Sloppy

The Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's weather luck, which came with the appointment of Joseph A. Farrell as general manager here and at Marlboro, went amiss today. Rain and more rain fell throughout the day. The track was deep and sloppy. However, some 5,000 of the faithful turned out for the day's battle of the bangtails.

Careful Dinah's victory came in the day's featured race, the Charlotte Hall Purse. There was nothing to the race except the slim payoff. Careful Dinah broke on top, immediately opened a two-length lead and drew out gradually without effort. Hazel W did a lot of hustling and was second by four lengths in front of a photo for third money in which Stray Chord got the camera verdict.

The MacThorn Farm's Presidential won the fifth race by ten lengths while carrying weight of 120 pounds. Greedan was second and The Queen was third. The Queen and Crius had little chance in the mile and a sixteenth affair. Light Chatter bumped into The Queen as the field left the gate. The winner was a $9.60 shot.

Long Lane Wins

The crowd made Aerial Five, a Chance Shot colt owned by John A. Manfuso, the favorite in the first race and the first-time starter finished second, beaten half a length by E. K. Bryson's Long Lane, part of an entry with Jouett Shouse's Ballarosa. Aerial Fire was off in the middle of the pack and had something taken out of him getting to contention on the inside. Distant Star was third in the limit field of a dozen 2-year-olds going a half-mile.

Trainer Hirsch Jacobs added another winner to his long string and the favorite players rejoiced in the third race when Irish Moon came from far back to win going away. Apprehend was second and Mama's Boy was third. The winner paid $5.50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONG LANE (entry), $19.10, $8.40, $5.00; AERIAL FIRE, $6.40, $4.30; DISTANT STAR, $4.40.

LONG LANE showed good speed to go to contention at once, disposed of DISTANT STAR to take command and held sway thereafter under a hard drive. AERIAL FIRE was off in a tangle, went through on the inside to improve his position, but hung after being shaken up midway of the stretch. DISTANT STAR had been early speed and tired gradually when displaced. RELUCTANT MISS showed a good effort and closed gamely.

BLABLAH, off alertly and having speed to go to the front in the opening furlong, drew clear without effort and won in hand. AUTUMNQUEST broke in the first flight, raced wide and closed full of run, but was no match for the winner. REMOLEE, first away, was hard ridden and weakened in the closing eighth. BULLET B. was off very slowly and closed with a bold rush.

Daily Double, LONG LANE and BLABLAH, Paid $41.90.

IRISH MOON, slow to begin, improved her position along the rail, saved much ground while moving up boldly entering the stretch, took command and withstood a drive to hold APPREHEND safe. The latter, lacking early speed, came to the outside for racing room, moved up menacingly, but hung at the end. MAMA'S BOY was a forward factor from the start and tired gradually through the stretch. HAPPY HOSTESS was hustled to the front, set a good pace to the stretch and weakened suddenly.

CAREFUL DINAH, first to show in front, opened a good lead without effort and won with speed in reserve. HAZEL W. went to contention with good energy and held on gamely, but was no match for the winner. STRAY CHORD was closest to the early pace and tired gradually through the stretch. ANTI AIR was held safe.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:15. THE QUEEN was knocked back at the start and rallied mildly. COUNT TETRARCH could not keep up. LIGHT CHATTER bore in at the start and came over on CRIUS. The latter was rushed to contention, showed speed for a half and stopped.

Dear Al:

One thing that may confuse the New York betters who will get their first taste of the mutuels when Jamaica opens next Monday is the "field." For years New York has had 18 and sometimes 25 juveniles in a race. The tote provides for individual betting on only 12 post positions so all horses over that number will be grouped in a mutuel field. The Puett Gate people have planned far ahead and will have two gates to provide for a large number of starters. One gate has 14 stalls and another has eight. But why worry about New York? Agua Caliente believes in going in for races in a big way. The Sunday program at the Mexico track provides for 15 events.

Even Confucius should have been able to pick at least one winner. Johnny McTaggart, jr., will swing into saddle action tomorrow. He is under contract to Frank J. Kearns. Johnny's father was one of the country's best 2-year-old riders. Starting yesterday's program, favorites had clicked in 22 of 42 races, which is some kind of a record. This fact has had a stimulating effect on the betting, too. The weights came out yesterday for the Harford Handicap, $5,000 added opening day feature at Havre de Grace. Here's some of them: Fighting Fox, 126; Sun Egret, 122; Rough Time, 122; Slow Motion, 118; Isaroma, 118; Honey Cloud, 117; Speed to Spare, 116; Jay Jay, 114; Lady Maryland, 111; Como No, 110; General Mowlee, 105. The weights range down to 100 pounds for Morstep, Flota, Clyde Tolson and Arden Lass. Racing Secretary Bill Shewbridge is distributing condition books for the Wheeling, W. Va., meeting, opening May 30.

With the erection of new barns, Charles Town can now take care of 700 horses. I don't like to bore you with weights for stakes but the tonnage for the Southern Maryland Handicap, Saturday's feature here just came in and I'll pass a few of them along: Challephen, 123; Honey Cloud, 120; Sun Egret, 120; Aethelwold, 115; Pagliacci, 114; Conde Rico, 112; War Minister, 112; Conflado, 109; Bosley, 108. Some of the lightweights are Jehoover, 100; Arden Lass, 98, and Clyde Tolson, 98. Confucius say: It looks like I'm a glutton but Portunus will get the mutton.

BILL.

First race—Sun Ginger turned back a competent field of maiden juveniles racing over a good track with apparent ease on opening day. Running with a claiming tag today, she stands out as the class. Brown Flower, favorite in her recent outing with this sort, met interference and finished second to Pete's Prince. On general form she figures as the better of the two.

Second race—Flying Waters, making his first start at New Orleans under the Pelleteri silks, finished second, beaten a head. He meets cheaper contention in this field of maidens and should win. Kilplacer was outclassed in an allowance event at Santa Anita last start but rates a good chance here. Sealoch has had a conditioner over this track and is dangerous.

Third race—Red Jack is gifted with sharp early foot and though he has been on the sidelines since last June, he needs only be fit to win here. Hiblaze is a consistent campaigner among the better grade racers on half mile circuits and looms as the most serious contention. Screen won his last but didn't beat much.

Fourth race—Teddy Patic was unplaced in his last two heats on the West Coast but prior to that scored over a shifty field of platers. He likes this track and mud moves him up. Rissa showed little at Oaklawn but has been working well over the local strip and in view of previous victories over this track rates a good chance. Double Back might better a poor recent race.

Fifth Race—Sun Pharos has been pitted against the best 3-year-olds in California and held his own in creditable manner. He receives first consideration in this field. Rough Pass failed to live up to his performances of last year and may need several more races before finding best form. Rawson should show.

Sixth race—Wahcoo turned in a creditable effort when fourth to Iskie in his first start of the season last week. His time was good in that affair and if he holds his speed over the additional distance he should win. Busy Fingers is the class of the race but recent races have been poor. Match Point indicated good form in his last and is dangerous.

Seventh race—Uvalde dropped a nose decision to Lady Orchid in his last heat at this track. The competition in this heat is slightly inferior and mud increases the chances of the Jacobs-trained thoroughbred. Heraldic figures to whip the others after conditioning received in his last race. Portunus might be close.

Best bet—Uvalde.

Horses to Watch At Bowie Track

FLYING LEGION—Cost $3,700 as a yearling and has worked well. Worth watching.

FIRE BALL—Raced well at New Orleans and should click over a distance.

AFFIRMATION—Turned in a good trial and is ready for set of brackets.

Charlottesville Dog Show Set For April 20

Fox Hound Leads Breeds in University Kennel Club Show

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., April 8.—At the annual bench show of the University Kennel Club, to be held Saturday, April 20, there will be classes for all breeds of dogs, many of which have never been seen in the county before.

Special awards and features in the printed premium list reveal that the show committee has recognized the fact that the fox hound is Virginia's most popular breed.

In addition to the regular ribbon awards in each class for fox hounds, a liberal cash prize is offered for the best hound, with cash prizes also for second and third. The club has further offered an additional cash prize to the winner's dogs and bitch. Should the judges put the dogs up in the hound group, he will be eligible for the handsome sterling silver group prize.

Probably a more popular feature than the exhibition and judging of individual hounds will be the pack class to be shown at night. Entry conditions are that a pack must consist of five couples, and must be shown with the attendants in full livery of their respective hunt clubs.

Since this event is to be followed by the "group" judging in which the best sporting dog, the best hound, the best terrier, etc., are selected from the winners in the classes and since those six winners are then shown to decide the award of "Best in the Show," the night exh

U. S. Steel Co., Texas Corp. Plan Issues

New Securities Seek To Shave Interest On Present Debts

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—Two of the Nation's biggest industrial concerns—the United States Steel Corporation and the Texas Corporation—made plans today to tap overflowing pools of idle money and shave interest costs on outstanding debts.

The decision of these two front-rank companies to undertake refunding operations was greeted in some bond circles as a forerunner of other extensive new financing projects in what may become the heaviest run of public offerings since 1936 and early 1937.

A record supply of idle money, increased in recent months by big gold shipments and capital transfers from Europe and Canada, have put high-grade investments at premiums, bond men said. A rise in bond prices lately also was cited as an influence in the wider re-opening of the capital market.

To Repay Debentures

Directors of Texas Corporation voted to repay $60,000,000 in 3½ per cent debentures, due 1951, and to issue a like amount of new debentures maturing in not less than 20 years.

United States Steel, it was disclosed, studied details of a proposed issue to raise funds for repayment of its 3¼ per cent debentures.

Out of an original issue of $100,000,000 sold in 1938 to provide money for paying of bank loans and carrying on a plant modernization program, there were outstanding at the close of 1939 $95,140,500.

Public Offering Planned

A spokesman for the corporation said the new financing probably would be a public offering to take advantage of the opportunity in the security markets to obtain money at a lower interest cost than the 3¼ per cent coupon.

The bonds, maturing in 1948, are redeemable on any interest date on 30 days notice or any other date on 60 days notice at 103 through June 1, 1941. The bonds were quoted as high as 106⅝ on the stock exchange this year.

Operations to Contract

Coincidentally, an estimate that steel mill operations will contract again this week to 61.3 per cent of the Nation's capacity, was released by the American Iron & Steel Institute. An advance last week to 61.7 per cent temporarily broke the long spring decline.

American Airlines Traffic Up 81.5%

New York, April 8 (AP).—American Airlines announced today it transported 54,840 revenue passengers in March, an increase of 81.5 per cent over March, 1939, and of 41.8 per cent over February of this year.

Zinc Output Rises

New York, April 8 (AP).—A rise in the production of zinc, but a decline in domestic shipments in March, as compared with February, was reported today by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics. Zinc production in March was 57,620 short tons, compared with 54,532 in February and 45,084 in March, 1939.

Market Gains Fraction, Despite Sales To Take Profits; Trading Remains Heavy; Shipbuilding Shares Enjoy Good Demand

New York, April 8.—A new high for the current revival of the stock market was established in early dealings today. Buying, encouraged by last week's noteworthy performance, accumulated over the week-end and brought a continuation of the move for the first two hours of trading.

Some profit taking halted the forward move and when the weekly report of steel operations showed a slight decline for this week's rate, the selling became more pronounced. At the close the market was virtually unchanged for the day, the composite average showing a gain of 0.01 point.

Trading continued heavy, indicating that the street and investors generally are taking more interest in junior securities. Volume for the day amounted to 1,260,360 shares and before the profit taking made itself felt, 132 individual issues had established new highs for the year.

Steel Report a Dampener

Steel stocks averaged about a quarter point lower. The decline in operations for the industry was small, amounting to only 0.4 point, but the hope had been for some slight improvement. Operations now are at 61.3 per cent of capacity. Other business news was more favorable. But the greatest influence in recent dealings has been the growing conviction that, in politics, a vital change has taken place in American thinking.

Business men have been forced to consider politics as rating in importance above the war and the normal influences of trade. The intermittent tests of strength in politics have exerted the most telling influence on business and security markets.

Air Stocks Dip Slightly

Steel was the most active stock in today's dealings. Curtiss-Wright led the aviations with a fractional gain while Lockheed continued its strong performance by going to a new high. The air transportation stocks, which were so prominent on the upside last week, held near their highs but in most cases were set back fractions by realizing sales.

Shipbuilding shares were in demand, aided in part by indications that the war on the sea will soon be intensified. New York Shipbuilding was a leader in this division. Among less active stocks, Allied Chemical added 2½ points, duPont 1⅝ and Public Service of New Jersey a major fraction. Bethlehem lost 1⅛ and there were small declines in Westinghouse, Woolworth, Loew's, C. & O., Commonwealth & Southern preferred and Republic Steel.

Scandinavian Bonds Drop

Scandinavian bonds dropped sharply today in the listed market owing to the latest developments in Europe's war reflecting on the northern countries. Other departments of the bond market were relatively firm, with some of the local tractions standing out. Interborough and B.-M. T. bonds in general were good, owing to the announced expectation of concluding unification this summer.

Norwegian bonds fell 2 to 5 points on the British mining of territorial waters. There was not much selling pressure. Danish securities were down 2 to 4 points. Italian 7s dropped into low ground. Belgians were only fractionally lower. Belligerent country bonds drifted slightly downward. Even the Latin-Americans were somewhat affected by the gloom.

Interborough bonds were up about a point on the average, owing to the announcement of early exchange of bonds for new 40-year city 3s. B. M. I. issues were slightly higher.

Best grade bonds were motionless, save in those instances where refunding is rumored or in negotiation. United States Treasury securities were only smallest fractions away from the close of last Saturday.

New York, April 8.—The British pound dropped 1½ cents today as stormy words flew abroad over the Allied nations' latest blockade move against Germany.

Riggs Elevates O'Neal, Bisselle, D. J. Callahan

2 Vice Presidents Are Added by Bank To Care for Growth

Election of Nelson B. O'Neal and Hulbert T. Bisselle, assistant vice presidents, to be vice presidents, and of Daniel J. Callahan, jr., assistant cashier, to the position of assistant vice president, was announced yesterday by Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank.

Fleming stated that the continued growth of the bank made it desirable to enlarge the responsibilities of these officers, whose experience and training in the organization had qualified them for this advancement.

Tax Specialist

O'Neal entered the service of Riggs National Bank in December, 1918, as general bookkeeper. He was later made assistant auditor, assistant cashier and, from 1925 to 1938, served as manager of the bank's seven branches. He has specialized in investments and income tax matters, as well as general operating practice.

Bisselle became identified with Riggs National Bank in December, 1920, as secretary to the vice president in charge of the credit department, and was elected assistant cashier in 1925 and assistant vice president in January, 1939. His experience has been largely along the line of credits, and he is regarded as an expert in such matters. He organized the credit bureau of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, is a member of the Washington Association of Credit Men and a trustee of the Better Business Bureau.

Callahan Began as Runner

Callahan entered the bank's service in 1923 as a runner, and served through the various departments and was made assistant cashier in 1931, and placed in charge of the customers' securities department. He has been identified with a number of civic organizations and is a member of the Chevy Chase Club.

The Bureau of Mines said yesterday the total supply of all oils at the end of February was 533,046,000 barrels, or a 144-day supply, as compared with 520,446,000 in January and 564,928,000 in February, 1939.

N. Y. Exchange Nominates 2 As Governors

St. Louis, Philadelphia Brokers to Be Voted on At May 13 Election

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—One St. Louis broker and anoter from Philadelphia were nominated as governors of the New York Stock Exchange today. The official slate, to be acted upon at the May 13 election, included Russell E. Gardner, jr., of St. Louis, and Edgar Scott, of Philadelphia.

They will serve as "governors outside New York" on a board of which Charles B. Harding, of New York, is the nominee for chairman.

Officials of the exchange said it was "too early to know" whether there would be any changes in the governors representing the public, who are elected by the board after it is seated. At the present time these are Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears Roebuck & Co.; Carle E. Conway, president of Continental Can Co., and Curtis E. Calder, president of American & Foreign Power Co.

Harding has been vice chairman of the board of governors. Robert P. Boylan, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade, and Edward E. Bartlett, jr., present chairman, were prominent candidates for the top place along with Harding.

Reserve Banks Show Increase in Loans

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday the seventh consecutive weekly rise in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks. In 101 leading cities, these loans increased $31,000,000 to $4,414,000,000.

There was talk of a move to run Bartlett for reelection as chairman.

G. M. C. Sales In 1st Quarter Set Record

549,182 Units Moved As Compared With 431,057 Last Year

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—General Motors Corporation today reported first quarter 1940 sales the greatest for any similar period in its history. Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada plus overseas shipments were 549,182, compared with 431,057 in the first quarter of 1939.

Sales to United States consumers in the first three months of 1940 totaled 415,308 units, compared with 314,178 in the 1939 period. Sales to dealers in the United States amounted to 506,449, against 375,597 a year ago.

Heavy Demand Is Seen

An unexpected heavy retail demand for new motorcars is noted by Ward's Automotive reports in its current issue as creating a "very optimistic picture," in the automobile industry at this time.

Production eased off slightly last week with an assembly total of 101,655 units compared with 103,370 in the previous week but the trade publication says that in view of the "remarkable rallying power" shown in retail sales late in March output schedules for April may be increased somewhat. "Military buying and planning dominate factory developments. Big orders, domestically and from abroad, have come into White, G. M. C. and Dodge. There are signs of similar situations pending at Mack and at International Harvester."

The Automobile Manufacturers Association today placed factory sales of automobiles and trucks during the first quarter of this year at 1,310,234 units, an increase of 23 per cent over the same period in 1939.

"More automobiles and trucks were sold during the first quarter this year, according to the preliminary estimate," said the statement, "than in any quarter in history with the exception of 1929."

March sales of $21,468,666, an in-

J. C. Penney Co. today reported crease of 14.6 per cent form $18,732,810 in March a year ago. Sales of $55,791,005 in the first quarter of the year represented a gain of 11.8 per cent from $49,873,314 in the similar 1939 period.

Unfilled orders at the end of the year totaled $10,175,151, against $2,081,572 a year earlier. Company's plant is in Long Island City, N. Y.

San Diego Gas

Cities Service Co. and subsidiaries, for the year 1939, today reported consolidated net income of $6,568,742 after charges, compared with $5,814,515 in 1938.

Rayon Cord Tires Proved Superior To Cotton Type

Cincinnati, April 8 (AP).—Automobile tires with cords made of rayon were described to the American Chemical Society today as 3,000 per cent more durable in hot weather driving than standard tires of cotton cord.

The rayon is made from the same raw cotton which has been used in tires, so that the improvement does not promise any economic dislocation in use of cotton. William H. Bradshaw, director of rayon research for the duPont Co., said results in road tests are "astounding." On an overloaded, high speed run in a hot country, rayon tires gave 80,000 miles of service under conditions that wore out ordinary tires in 3,000 miles.

Rain Reports Keep Grains Low, Uneven

Rallies Fade Before Weather, But Prices Show Little Change

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 8.—Improved wheat belt moisture conditions disturbed the grain market again today but prices closed with little net change for the session.

Declines of as much as ⅞ cent reflected week-end rains at times although the sharp slump Saturday largely discounted the precipitation. There were frequent rallies, however, and at one stage prices were as much as ⅝ above the previous close, due principally to buying inspired by strength in securities and European war news.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher compared with Saturday's finish; May, $1.04⅛; July, $1.03@1.03⅛. Corn was ⅛ off to ⅜ up; May, 57⅛; July, 58¾. Oats ⅛-⅜. Rye ⅛-¼ up, and lard 2 to 5 higher.

Army Orders 50 Bombers Of Heavy Type

Improved 'Flying Fortresses' to Cost Total of $8,000,000

The Army yesterday placed an $8,000,000 order with the Boeing Aircraft Co., Seattle, Wash., for approximately 50 17-ton four-engined bombers.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said the planes are of the Boeing "flying fortress" type, but contain several improvements over earlier models. The contract ends the heavy bomber program of the Army Air Corps for the present. Several hundred of the powerful, long-range craft are now in service or on order.

Meanwhile, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, announced he would seek an addition of $12,700,000 to the Army appropriation bill to provide an air base at Anchorage, Alaska. Funds for the base were eliminated from the bill last week in the House.

Two Hours From Japan

Schwellenbach cited newspaper reports of construction of fortifications in Siberia and said the area affected was within sight of the Aleutian Islands off Alaska. The islands, he said, are only two hours from Japan by fast bombing plane.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, also urged strengthening Alaskan defenses and declared the State Department should establish the ownership of Wrangell Island, between Alaska and Siberia. The island is claimed by Russia, though Reynolds says the United States has prior rights.

Army officials said the contract for the bombers, designated as B-17Ds, completed orders for the Air Corps' new 5,500-plane strength except for 140 small craft for training and contact work between ground troops.

College Pilots Fly to Capital, Open Parley

Lieut. Wagner Describes Training At Pensacola, Fla.

The air-mindedness of youth was reflected yesterday when 75 students from a score of colleges throughout the country gathered at the Wardman Park Hotel for the sixth national Intercollegiate Flying Club Conference.

Nearly a dozen young women were in the group which heard Lieut. Thomas Wagner, U. S. N. R., describe cadet training at Pensacola, Fla. Three of those attending flew to Washington Sunday in a three-place Fairchild 24 after a four-and-one-half hour flight from Detroit, where they are students at the University of Detroit.

Fly "Because We Love It"

Larry Zygmunt and Carl Setili, both juniors, and Frank Wignall, instructor for the university's flying club, made the flight.

Three young women students from Lake Erie College, Marjorie Willoughby, Jean Fulton and Anita Crawford, said they took up aviation "because we love it."

They said they have no great ambition for a career in aviation, but have taken advantage of the Civil Aeronautics training program offered at their school because it realized their life-long ambitions. Should America enter a war, and men pilots be called for military duty, they said they would be willing to "make a go" at commercial aviation.

Lieut. Wagner described the training program at Pensacola as "the best in the world." The Navy spends $10,000 on each man it trains during a period of several months, he said.

Banquet Tonight

Kenyon College was represented by the largest number of students with 14 attending. The University of Toledo was represented by 10, and the University of Detroit by six. Three flying clubs were represented in addition to the colleges.

Highlight of the convention will be at 8:30 p. m. today, when the annual banquet will be held at the Shoreham Hotel.

Williams, of 3721 Livingston street northwest, freshman student in the college of arts and sciences, Tulane University, was named on the honor roll of the first semester of the 1939-40 session. Presence on the honor roll means that the student attained an average of B or better.

Bridge Contract

Playing skill that wins national championships is displayed in today's hand, which was neatly manipulated by Charles Lochridge, recent winner of the Eastern Goldman Cup with M. D. Maier of the Four Aces.

Lochridge was doubled at four hearts and he made the contract with an extra trick for "top on the board."

West opened the ace of spades and, receiving the jack from his partner, continued the suit. East's king took the second trick and a low club was played back, dummy's king winning. Lochridge played the ace of diamonds and a low diamond, trumping with his heart deuce. Then he cashed the ace of clubs. The fall of the queen revealed the distribution of the adverse clubs and established his jack and nine as winners. With this piece of good luck, he led a low heart to the board's king, and the nine from the West hand indicated that West had no more. The heart seven was returned, and declarer finessed the eight in his hand which held. He cashed the jack and nine of clubs and trumped the losing seven with dummy's heart ten. A diamond was ruffed with the queen of hearts; North's heart ace took the last trick.

Lochridge made four hearts, doubled, with an extra trick losing two spades.

Library Faces Hazard of Fire, Repairs Ordered

A check by the District fire marshal has revealed that certain improvements must be made at the old Library of Congress Building to remedy what is described as exposure to "certain definite fire hazards," Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate yesterday shortly before it provided for the upkeep of the library by passing the $23,705,720 legislative appropriation bill.

Senator Barkley, who is chairman of the Joint Congressional Library Committee, said Librarian Archibald MacLeish and the District Fire Department had informed him in the last few days that improvements were needed, but the information came too late for consideration in yesterday's bill.

MacLeish described the building as being "sound as a nut," but said that a routine check had disclosed a long list of "little things" that should be done in the interests of safety.

It's a little difficult to keep up with the kings of swing what with the jitterbugs' slightly Mexican habit of setting up rulers just to watch 'em topple, but it's safe to say that at the moment Glenn Miller is lord of all he surveys in the jive world.

Washington's vast army of rug-cutters will be delighted to know that Mr. Miller and his talented lads will make the Nation's Capital their headquarters from tonight until early June and will originate 21 of their network broadcasts from here.

The lads are playing several dates in the general vicinity of Washington, so Miller decided he'd establish temporary headquarters here and do his broadcasts from the Wardman Park Hotel's theater.

Beginning this evening, Miller's Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday 10 o'clock sessions will be broadcast until May 2. He will be away a week but will resume from the Wardman May 14 and continue until June 6.

Inasmuch as Miller set something of a box office record the last time he played a vaudeville date in town, it seems logical to expect that you folks would like to hear him. WJSV will have 500 tickets for each performance and will dole 'em out to the first comers at the Earle Building studios. Our talented switchboard custodians will have the ducats.

Tickets for the first three days are on hand now. The next three-day session (Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 16-18) will be available the preceding Saturday. This procedure will be followed while Miller is here. It will be impossible for WJSV to fill mail requests, so you will nave to pick up the tickets in person.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SHAMROCK O'TOOLE

Chapter 1

CLANCY O'TOOLE, watching the two women frantically sewing, took his pipe out of his mouth and grinned.

"Sure," he said placidly, "what chance has a poor lad got with the two of ye gangin' up to get him married off the minute he sets foot in the house from Milwaukee? 'Tis a dirty Irish trick!"

Shamrock lifted her head and smiled:

"It is that! But I never would have thought of askin' Karl to marry me if Mrs. Hetrick hadn't put the idea into my head."

Karl's mother chuckled, her round face beaming with affection as she looked over at the young girl in the green gingham dress:

"As if you and my Karlie hadn't been promised to each other since you were big enough to talk. He's been savin' his pennies since he carried papers so's he could marry you. Since Uncle Augie died and left him the money, there's no need to wait any longer."

Clancy sighed: "Sure I agree with ye, Mrs. Hetrick. 'Tis glad I'll be to see Smoky married and settled down with a fine upstandin' young fireman like Karl."

They Called Her Smoky

Since early childhood Shamrock O'Toole had been called Smoky. The nickname had been given to her by the firemen at the station house because, when the bells rang, they could count on the little girl from next door being under their feet almost before the sound died away.

Her father had given 19 years to the Astoria Fire Department before a burning roof toppled him to the street a few months before, injuring his back and leaving him with a weak heart. Confined to a wheel chair, a tired broken man, his black hair had grown white and his thoughts dark. Except for his child, Clancy O'Toole felt there was nothing left for which to live.

Mrs. O'Toole had died with pneumonia ten years before, when Shamrock was 9. It was the widowed Mrs. Hetrick, Karl's mother, who had taken Smoky under her wing and taught her how to cook and keep house for her father, saying she was just training her in how to be a good daughter-in-law. It seemed only natural that some day Shamrock and Karl should marry. Karl was the only boy friend Smoky had ever had. They had been inseparable since infancy.

Karl, the Fireman

It was Clancy who had taught the younger man all he knew of being a fireman, and because of this a few months before Karl had been admitted to the department. It was a proud day for Clancy and Shamrock, and Mrs. Hetrick had been relieved that at last her blond, hanadsome son had come of age and settled down to his life work. Clancy had great hopes for his future son-in-law. He had been through high school and taken a business course. If he worked hard he might even be chief some day, Clancy said.

The O'Tooles and the Hetricks lived in that section of New York City over Queensborough Bridge, where hundreds of small homes still stand. Here live the home loving, settled American and foreign-born Germans, Swedes, Irish, Polish Italians. An hard-working, peace-loving lot, apparently totaly oblivious to the gay life over the river in Manhattan, or the wealthier restricted areas farther out the island.

A dozen languages are spoken on the same street, and occasionally an apartment house rises up amid the little frame houses to remind the citizenry that, before long old Steinway will be no more.

Clancy O'Toole often said he could remember when he shot jack rabbits in the area that is now the main business section. Just after he came over from the old country, before he married and built the house that still was the roof over his head.

It was a small brown shingle house with green shutters, bounded on one side by the fire station and the other by the neighboring Hetricks. Shamrock, loving the soil, had planted a flower garden in the small patch of ground in back every summer since she was a small child.

Now it was a dismal soot-smeared snowy streak of earth, frozen in the January wind. But inside the six rooms were warm and cozy, a testimonial to Smoky's good taste and busy little hands.

Smoky's Love Affair

There was silence for some time in the O'Toole living room as Clancy, from his chair, watched the afternoon sun playing on his child's happy face and thought what a baby she seemed to be getting married.

To the father, his daughter was the most beautiful girl in the world, and certainly no one would have said she wasn't a little more than pretty.

With one foot curled under her, she looked so much like her mother the man's heart filled with an almost unbearable longing. The green gingham gown hugged her young figure tightly, showing a small waist and round breasts that rose and fell softly with her breathing.

Clancy sighed. He wondered if the boy next door really realized what it meant to get a girl like Shamrock in a day and age when her kind were so scarce.

Smoky was a one-man woman, like her mother. She would settle down with her young fireman husband to keep his house and have his babies, and if the world fell down around them she would be there by his side to help pick up the pieces.

The father wondered if he had been quite right in not urging her on to better her station in life. Sometimes he thought it had been a little selfish on his part. With sacrifice he could have sent her to college, and she would have been trained to take her place with the best of 'em.

College Not for Her

But when he had off-handedly suggested such a thing Smoky had laughed and asked him what good college would do when she'd just get married anyway. Why should she want to go to college when Karl didn't? But Clancy had never quite got over his yearning to see his child become a great lady.

He felt certain if she had gone in for a career of dancing nothing could have kept her from the heights. Shamrock O'Toole was born to dance. Even though he had sent her to the dancing school on Grand avenue she had confined her art to recitals or the firemen's benefits.

Karl didn't approve of a young lady being a chorus girl. Shamrock was delighted that he seemed so jealous of her in her scant dancing costumes, and his frown of disapproval had made her heart sing. If he didn't love her, would it make any difference to him?

And all the girls were crazy about Karl because he was the best-looking boy in school, and the handsomest rookie that ever joined the fire department. Everybody said so.

Smoky enjoyed just sitting looking at him. Especially in the evening, when he read his paper and smoked his pipe, with the light on his blond hair and broad, evenly featured face.

There was something in the way he looked up and smiled that caught Smoky's heart and she was certain no other man would ever exist for her. Dear Karl, who would some day be the father of her children and the head of her house.

Wedding Preparations

Finally, breaking the silence, Smoky tossed the slip she had been sewing to the couch and stretched.

"Thank goodness, that's finished! This room looks like a fire sale!"

Mrs. Hetrick folded the night gown she was embroidering.

"Yah! My back's breakin'. I guess I'd better go home and get at my baking. It will take lots of cake for the wedding."

Court Denies Sick Benefits To Draftees

Men Called in War But Rejected by Army Held Not Eligible

War Department regulations which deny hospitalization and other veterans' benefits to more than 250,000 draftees who were rejected for World War service were upheld yesterday by a unanimous decision of the United States Court of Appeals here.

The court's opinion, by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, approved the distinction between "honorable discharge" given men who saw actual service, and "discharge from draft," given men called for service but found to be disqualified.

The court dismissed the suit of Lloyd M. Davis, Clifton, N. C., to compel the Secretary of War to convert his "discharge from draft" into an "honorable discharge."

Veterans with "honorable discharges" and certain groups of rejected draftees, for whom exceptions are made, are entitled to hospitalization and other benefits.

Davis was called before the Knoxville, Tenn., draft board July 20, 1918, and ordered into service, reporting on July 29 to a camp in South Carolina. On August 1 an Army physician recommended his rejection because he was underweight, but Davis continued to serve until August 6, when he collapsed at drill. He remained in a camp hospital until August 30 and then was given a "discharge from draft" dated back to August 9.

Davis asked the District Court last year to order that he be given an "honorable discharge" or to declare that he had the same rights as a veterans who did receive such a discharge. Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue refused.

Upholding Justice O'Donoghue, Chief Justice Groner said, "Congress having failed to prescribe the form of discharge and having left it to the discretion of the President, acting through the Secretary of War, we are wholly without any effective power of review. That this must result in the denial of hospitalization is regrettable, but beyond our control."

A canvass of veterans' legislative leaders in Congress last night indicated there is no Capitol Hill disposition to alter draft discharges by law.

Secret Session of Paris Senate To Debate on Cabinet Today

By P. J. Philip

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 8.—Another critical week will begin tomorrow when the Senate in secret session will debate and pass judgment on the composition and policy of the Paul Reynaud cabinet.

This will be the first contact between the premier and the Senate since the government was formed. Reynaud will be able to reply to his critics that he formed his government and has done all that he has done in these past three weeks with a view to fulfilling the instructions which the Senate gave to his predecessor, to conduct the war with ever-growing energy.

Until a few days ago it seemed very doubtful whether the new government would survive the test of this secret session of the Senate and the debate scheduled to begin in the Chamber on Thursday. However, there has been a distinct improvement in the outlook for the government.

Radical Emotion Subsided

The emotion in the Radical Party which led to the split vote on the government's first meeting with the Chamber of Deputies has died down to some extent and the view has gained ground that it would be a grave error to begin again changing governments too often.

Within France that habit has no great significance. Everybody grumbles about it but does not attach too much importance to it. It is recognized, however, that another change of government, without having given Reynaud time to prove his worth would have a prejudicial effect abroad.

In addition, senators and deputies have, during these past two weeks, found themselves more often in agreement with what Reynaud has done than against it and it is therefore unlikely that his inclusion of the Socialists in the cabinet will be as was the case at the outset the only issue in debate. More than one radical organization has passed resolutions recommending its deputies to wait and see what the government does and reject it only if it is not sufficiently energetic, a criticism which is not likely to apply to Reynaud.

Majority Expected

One of the dangers which his cabinet may run is of seeming to be much under Leon Blum's protection. The speech and attitude of the Socialist leader nearly ruined the cabinet's chances at the outset by alienating the other parties.

Today's estimate on the eve of this rather momentous debate is that in both houses the government will obtain a working majority.

This afternoon a war cabinet meeting was held at the ministry of foreign affairs, attended by Generals Maurice Gustave Gamelin and Alphonse Georges. Tomorrow morning there will be a council of ministers at the Elysee Palace to examine the military and international situation.

Press Cafeteria Strike Continues As Parley Fails

Break-up of a conference of Press Cafeteria officials and representatives of Local 471, United Cafeteria Employes, of the C. I. O., yesterday continued the stalemate in the 16-day-old strike of 28 employes of the restaurant.

Harvey L. Cobb, the management's attorney, declared the meeting ended when he refused union demands that the cafeteria, in the National Press Building, Fourteenth and F streets northwest, reemploy the striking workers and compensate them for lost wages.

Jack Mink, union business agent, said he had sought to "settle the question of getting the strikers back to work before we talk about wages and hours." He declared he intended to press charges with the National Labor Relations Board that the management had "failed to negotiate in good faith."

Court Upholds Search of Autos For Numbers Slips

Search of suspected automobiles by detectives hunting violations of the antiumbers law was approved by the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

Justice Wiley Rutledge spoke for the court in dismissing the appeal of Edward Coupe and Henry Lynch, colored, who were sentenced to jail terms after a "wholly technical" defense failed to impress a jury in the District Court.

Officers followed Coupe's automobile after receiving a tip that he was collecting numbers bets along a route. After seeing in the back a carton of pads like those used by numbers writers, the officers searched the car and found slips. The District Court held this search lawful and refused to suppress it.

McNutt Probe Gag Is Ordered By Treasury

Secrecy Cloaks Inquiry Into '2 Per Cent Clubs;' Fine Threat Is Cited

By the Associated Press

Asserting that it was illegal for any Treasury official to talk about income tax investigations, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday tightened the lid of secrecy on reported investigations of Paul V. McNutt and the Indians "Two Per Cent clubs."

He said at a press conference that department officials were prohibited, under threat of a $1,000 fine, from even admitting investigations of anyone's income tax. Therefore, the Treasury would make no statement.

The Secretary's attention had been called to comment made at the White House recently by Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue. Helvering was widely quoted as saying that he expected the investigation of the Two Per Cent clubs to be concluded shortly and that there would be a public announcement of the results of the inquiry.

At the request of Morgenthau, Charles Schwarz, public relations chief of the Treasury, told reporters that Helvering claims to have been misquoted. When a reporter told Morgenthau that one of the newsmen who interviewed Helvering had made stenographic notes of the commissioner's remarks, Morgenthau said he did not know anything about the incident.

Helvering, asked for comment yesterday, said that no one was authorized to talk but Schwarz.

The two per cent clubs get their name from the fact that State employes are supposed to turn over to the State Democratic organization 2 per cent of their salaries.
